New U.S. gold rush on way

WASHINGTON (UPI) — America's third gold rush begins this week.

On Tuesday, the 41-year-old ban on gold ownership by private citizens ends. Instead of heading for California or Alaska to strike it rich —as miners did in the last century —Americans will try to make their fortunes in commodity markets. The U.S. gold demand for 1975 has been estimated at between 5 and 15 million ounces —$2.5 billion at current prices.

It will be available from banks, department stores, jewelry stores, coin dealers and stock brokers. It will be sold in futures contracts, like so much wheat on the commodity market. It will be sold by swindlers —six groups of them cozened at least $20 million out of would-be silver speculators during the last two months.

As in the other gold rushes a few fortunes will be made —but there will be more losers than winners.

The price of gold, like food and oil, has tripled in the past 18 months. It is now approaching $200 an ounce. Some financial experts say gold is about $70 an ounce higher than its commercial value, and increasing prices are because speculators hope to profit from the entry of Americans into the market.

"The gold market bears all the features of a classic pyramid sales scheme," said Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis. "The only way the price can be maintained is by roping in more suckers."

Charles Stahl, a commodities expert, said most Americans entering the gold market will have "their pockets picked."

Willis W. Alexander, executive vice president of the American Bankers Association, said: "On the basis of protracted discussions on gold within the ABA, we believe the strictest caution is in order for banks and individuals."

The reasons for these arguments:

—Gold pays no interest. The only way one can make money is on resale, and experts say prices must go up more than 15 per cent a year. Each time gold is bought or sold there will be a commission of about 8 per cent and an assay fee of 1 or 2 per cent.

—Gold is hard to store. Only the foolhardy investor would keep gold in a closet or under the mattress. Most will have to pay a fee to store and insure it.

—Gold resales are awkward. Most investors will have to resell where it was bought originally.

The Treasury will auction 2 million ounces of gold Friday — less than 1 per cent of its holdings. Bidding will be keyed to the market price. The United States is speculating a little, since its gold reserves are valued at $42.22 per ounce and sales near world market prices would attract billions of dollars.

River of gold flowing to U.S.; price hits $200

BRUSSELS (UPI) — Gold hit $200 per ounce in limited trading in Paris today and edged toward the $200 mark in other European markets. The dollar fell on most markets and hit a new alltime low in Zurich of 2.5125 francs.

The Paris stock market brokers association said the $200 figure was reached briefly at the first fixing of the day but only for the 26.4-pound gold bar.

A spokesman for the association said the closing price per ounce for the 2.2-pound ingot — which he said formed the basis of most trading —was $199.19, a new record.

Gold also hit $199 per ounce in private trading in London and Zurich and was quoted officially at $197 dollars in both centers.

London airport security officers said a river of gold is flowing through London en route to public sale in the United States.

Surcharge plan dead

Tax cut gaining favor with Ford

VAIL, Colo. (UPI) — President Ford will drop the controversial income tax surcharge from his new economic proposals to put more stress on recovering from recession and less on fighting inflation, according to administration sources.

They said Ford may even propose a tax cut to help revitalize the economy when he sends Congress his new set of economic recovery recommendations in January.

At his Rocky Mountain holiday retreat, Ford has been dividing his time between skiing and long strategy sessions with advisers on the economy and the need for energy conservation.

When he announced his original 31-point program to "Whip Inflation Now" in October, Ford came out strongly in favor of a 5 per cent surtax on family incomes of $15,000 and more as a means of siphoning off buying power and raising revenue. He called the surtax a major weapon against inflation, which he described repeatedly as "public enemy no. 1" and a greater threat than recession.

The surtax proposal got nowhere in the last Congress and neither did most of the other 31 original points.

White House press secretary Ronald Nessen acknowledged the President was scrapping parts of that program because he finds "the economic situation has changed."

Although White House officials have been billing the measures Ford will submit to Congress as "tough and hard," the President was not expected to seek wage and price controls.

Tires cut on 48 vehicles at area apartment house

West End sheriff's detectives this morning were searching for two men who may have slashed a total of 196 tires on 48 vehicles parked in Alta Loma this morning causing $6,000 to $7,000 damage.

The tire slashings were discovered about 3 a.m. by a sheriff's deputy investigating a prowler call at Eastwood Apartments, 8700 Lomita Ave. Deputy Fritz Thomas said he was called to the apartment by residents who reported someone was turning the main electrical switches in the apartment complex off and on.

Thomas arrived and questioned two men about the incident, but later released them. As Thomas was leaving he noticed that numerous cars and trucks parked at the apartment complex had flat tires. On closer examination Thomas said more than 40 cars and trucks had all their tires slashed.

A special log was made to list the numerous victims of the malicious mischief. Deputies said this morning they were going to recontact the two men questioned earlier at the apartment complex.

Deputies said a number of the apartment residents had at least two vehicles with all the tires slashed.

Detectives said it appeared as though the tires were slashed and punctured with a knife with an inch-wide blade. A number of residents reported hearing someone prowling around outside of their apartments for some time before the sheriff's department was notified.

Mills admits he's alcoholic, vows to end drinking

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Wilbur Mills, D-Ark., acknowledged today he is an alcoholic but said he will stop drinking entirely and will stay in the House of Representatives.

Mills, who entered Bethesda Naval Hospital Dec. 3 for what was described as exhaustion, said in a statement released through the office of the Ways and Means Committee:

"I ask the understanding of the members of Congress about what my tragic experiences have been. I know that I am a well man as long as I do not drink and, by the grace of God and with competent medical advice, and the support of friends, I will remain well.

"In light of the above, It is my intention to continue in the Congress of the United States."

Mills, who has already announced he will not seek the chairmanship of the House Ways and Means Committee which he headed for more than a decade and a half, said he realizes now his behavior of the past several months was not that of "the Wilbur Mills who has spent 36 years in Congress."

Mills said he did not understand at that time what was happening to him. Now, he said, he thinks "the fatigue and pressure built up by years of dedicated work" had a severe impact on him.

Mills has been at Bethesda since two days after he appeared on the Boston

Nicaragua pays terrorists $5 million

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — Left-wing guerrillas who took 13 hostages at a diplomatic cocktail party agreed today to release them in exchange for $5 million, freedom for 14 prisoners and safe passage to Cuba.

The Spanish and Mexican ambassadors, the archbishop of Managua and the Pope's representative in Nicaragua volunteered to fly along with the kidnapers to guarantee their safety.

The terrorists said they would kill their hostages at 12-hour intervals starting at 9 p.m. Tuesday if the government did not carry out the terms of the agreement.

"If there had been any other way to get our comrades out of jail this action would never have happened," they said in a broadcast manifesto.

They also demanded that the government increase the minimum salary for farm and industrial workers and private soldiers.

A government source said the $5 million ransom was flown into the country from the United States. President Anastasio Somoza had said earlier there was not that much cash in Nicaragua.

Valley is drenched but Baldy snowfall minimal

Three storm fronts combined over the weekend to drench the valley with more than an inch of rain, but snow conditions in the mountains today were minimal.

Temperatures dropped to the freezing range in much of the area both Sunday morning and today, but by the afternoon the sun melted much of the mountains snow. Ski lodges in the Mt. Baldy area report that an attempt to operate the ski lifts Sunday was dropped because of insufficient snow.

Nevertheless, the snow attracted large crowds to Baldy Sunday, and not all of them made it back safely. The San Bernardino sheriff's office reports three hikers are missing and rescue parties are searching the area with the aid of helicopters.

The missing hikers were identified as Glenn Carey, 17, Steve Decharme, 19, and his brother, Craig, 18, all of Chatsworth.

Sunny and fair weather is expected in the valley through New Year's Day. Slight winds are predicted for today increasing to Santa Ana conditions of up to 45 miles per hour Tuesday afternoon.

Jury gets Watergate case with 42 pages of instruction

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica today sent the Watergate coverup case of five of former President Richard M. Nixon's associates to the jury for deliberation.

In an impassioned conclusion to 42 pages of highly technical instructions, Sirica told the jurors that the American people as well as the five defendants are entitled to a "fair and impartial trial."

"They (the defendants) are entitled to the same fair and impartial trial that you would expect," Sirica said. "On the other hand, the government of the United States, that is, the people of our society, also are entitled to the same fair and impartial determination."

Sirica also warned the jurors in his charge that they should forget the pardon of Nixon during their deliberations.

Before Sirica gave the case to the jury, he released the five alternate jurors from service. He urged them not to discuss the case with family, friends or others —"no exceptions."

The 17 jurors and alternates —including 14 women and three men —have been sequestered since Oct. 11.

Sirica told the jury that the case had not been tried "for revenge or any other such purpose." He urged the jury to use "your good common sense" in arriving at an objective and fair verdict "fearlessly, calmly, dispassionately."

"Your duty is to ascertain what the truth is regarding these issues," Sirica said. "Each and everyone of us has a solemn duty to perform, to see that justice prevails —for the defendants and for the government."

Sirica spoke directly to that idea in his charge, a copy of which was distributed to the lawyers for both sides during the weekend.

3 high-level resignations reported

'No purges going on . . .' CIA says

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Central Intelligence Agency spokesman said today "there are no purges going on here" in connection with allegations of illegal CIA activities in U.S. domestic affairs.

But the spokesman said "a lot of guys are taking advantage of the benefits of early retirement and its financial advantages."

The spokesman would not specify if these persons were from the operations department, which is alleged to have conducted illegal activities against American citizens, including surveillance, wiretapping and opening of the mails.

"We never talk about operations," he said.

There were reports today that three more high-level officials have resigned from the operations division as part of a "major shakeup."

The spokesman, who is the top CIA official authorized to speak to the press, attended a top level meeting today at the agency's headquarters at Langley, Va., which presumably included CIA Director William E. Colby.

"I can say there are no purges going on here," he said.

The spokesman said "there will be no more statements" until President Ford returns to Washington Thursday from his skiing holiday at Vail, Colo.

The President has a 50-page report from Colby on the earlier allegations. All that could be learned authoritatively about that report was that he categorically stated no CIA domestic operations are going on now.

The CIA spokesman would not comment on the multitude of public reports and rumors circulating since Dec. 21 when a New York Times story said that the CIA in violation of its charter had "conducted a massive illegal domestic intelligence operation during the Nixon administration against the antiwar movement and other dissident groups."

The story expanded the time frame to the 1950s and other newspapers and magazines went further to include a host of other alleged activities extending to recent times.

Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., said he wanted a Watergate-type special prosecutor to investigate the reports. In an interview Sunday on ABC's "Issues and Answers," Proxmire said he had confirmed the reports of domestic spying.

"We must act to establish an independent special prosecutor with subpoena powers who will prosecute every illegal action by CIA agents, past or present," Proxmire said.

Boston will appeal federally ordered busing plan

BOSTON (UPI) — The city of Boston is going to the U.S. Supreme Court to appeal a federally ordered school busing plan —and three members of the city's school committee who voted against the plan are going to a U.S. district court to face contempt charges.

Mayor Kevin White Sunday authorized the city to appeal the busing plan the U.S. Supreme Court because "every legal avenue must be exhausted if we are to silence the rhetoric of rebellion."

Three Boston School Committee members prepared to face contempt charges today for voting against that city-wide school desegregation plan proposed to take effect next fall. They will appear before U.S. District Judge W. Arthur Garrity, who ordered the plan.

White's appeal would test the Garrity plan. "Tension feeds upon doubt and uncertainty," He said at a news conference. "This city will be paralyzed as long as there is a raging debate over the legal merits of the court order.

"Only when the debate has ended can we hope to restore order in our schools and proceed with the education of black and white students," he said.

John J. Kerrigan, Paul Ellison and John J. McDonough, who voted against the plan, said during the weekend they would continue their opposition.

Garrity Friday found them in civil contempt for failure to obey his order to deliver the approved program to him by Dec. 16.

"I'm prepared to do anything —and that includes going to jail —before I'll change my vote," said Kerrigan, chairman of the committee."

Ellison also agreed to stand firm.

"I cannot change my principles, my conscience or my strong personal beliefs. What are you if you surrender those rights?" said Ellison.

White said he wanted to avoid any heroics by "public officials protesting at the last minute that the court order is neither final or irrevocable."

"Therefore to clarify the issue once and for all I am today authorizing the city to finance an appeal to the United States Supreme Court. I am well aware that two federal courts have upheld this decree and that chances of a reversal are remote," he said.

ARRIVE FOR HEARING

Three members of the Boston School Committee, who refused to approve a court-ordered plan to desegregate 200 Boston schools by next fall, arrive at the Boston Federal Court for a hearing.

Two suspects in shooting, five in burglaries arrested in valley

In Pomona, two youths were arrested Saturday night on attempted murder and robbery charges stemming from the shooting of a 37-year-old Alhambra man in a restaurant parking lot.

Ronald Sheehee, 18, and Lloyd Rowe, 19, both of 2465 Leebee St., Pomona, were booked by officers after their yellow 1965 Pontiac was spotted on Laurel Avenue.

Theodore Bivens, the victim in the Friday night shooting at the Castaway Restaurant parking lot at 1600 N. Garnesha Blvd. was wounded twice during an altercation.

Bivens' wife told police that the headlights of their car evidently bothered two occupants of another car in the lot. Later, the windshield of Bivens' car blew out. He was taken to Pomona Valley Community Hospital where he was reported in fair condition.

Claremont police, meanwhile, captured four burglary suspects Sunday inside a home at 830 W. Harrison Ave. One of the men was carrying a watch allegedly taken from the residence, and jewelry was stacked, ready to be taken.

Bruce Johnson, 18 of Los Angeles, and three juveniles were booked for burglary at Claremont jail. A 13-year-old Pomona boy, and 17-and 15-year-old Los Angeles youths were arrested.

Officers said a neighbor called police to the home of Mrs. Hugh A. Thatcher at 3:41 p.m.

One suspect was caught trying to escape out the back door, while the other three were found inside the residence.

In Montclair police reported that a 20-year-old man was arrested on suspicion of burglary after he was discovered inside his neighbor's home at 4478 Princeton St. about 8:15 p.m.

According to Arthur Chichon, 41, of the Princeton Street address he was watching television and decided to get up to go to the bathroom. He said as he entered his master bedroom he saw his neighbor, identified as David Quintanar, 20, of 4488 Princeton St., standing in the doorway.

Chicon asked what the suspect was doing in his house, but the suspect suddenly produced a knife, police said. Chichon said he jumped back and the suspect ran out of the room and into the kitchen where he tripped over a barstool. Police were called to the scene. When they arrived they found the victim and suspect arguing in front of Chichon's home.

After questioning, Quintanar was arrested on suspicion of first-degree burglary and assault with a deadly weapon. He was booked in the West End Jail.

Deputies find woman dead on bathroom floor

A 52-year-old Glendora woman was found dead in her home Saturday, the victim of an apparent suicide.

Anita Catherine La Londe of 19154 Armstead St., was found by sheriff's deputies on the floor of a bathroom at 11 a.m.

Deputies said an electric knife had been plugged into a wall, and was found near the body. The woman had a wound in her neck, apparently made by the knife, officers added.

Her son told deputies she had been despondent for several weeks.

SPOTLIGHT ON CRIME

Seven persons injured in weekend accidents

Seven persons were injured Sunday in separate accidents in the valley area.

The most seriously injured was Richard Antone Simmons, 33, of 896 E. 6th St., Pomona, who today is in stable condition at Pomona Valley Community Hospital.

Simmons was eastbound on the San Bernardino Freeway west of Monte Vista Avenue in Montclair on a motorcycle when he was struck from behind by a car which fled, he told highway patrolmen.

Simmons said he lost control, slid and struck the guardrail. He suffered head cuts and abrasions and complained of chest pain, according to the CHP report.

A 7-year-old Los Angeles boy, Jesus Robert Madrid, apparently ran into the side of a slow-moving car at Mt. Baldy Village about 1:45 p.m. Sunday. He was taken to Pomona Valley Community Hospital by ambulance, treated and released.

The driver of the car, Lloyd F. Saunders, 58, of 652 Hawthorne St., Ontario, told officers he saw the boy standing on the right shoulder of Mt. Baldy Road when suddenly the boy turned and ran into the right side of his car.

Witnesses said the child had been playing in the snow and had his hands full of snowballs.

Miria C Pe, 25, Los Angeles, said she would see her own doctor for injuries she received when the car in which she was riding was rear-ended by another car, according to highway patrolmen.

The accident occurred at 3:50 p.m. on Mt. Baldy Road at the Shinn Road intersection. Drivers were Andrew Parmelle Pe, 28, Los Angeles, and Armida Bedoy, 22, Pico Rivera.

April Doreen Jaeger, 24, of 636 Alamosa Dr., Claremont, said she would see her family doctor for treatment of injuries she received about 11:50 a.m. when her car was struck while stopped at the Padua Avenue-Alamosa Drive intersection in Claremont.

The driver of the second vehicle involved was Kolin Shean McKinstry, 37, 3105 Padua Avenue.

In Upland two persons were injured when a motorcycle slid into the side of a pickup truck making a left turn onto Mountain Avenue near Euclid Avenue Sunday morning.

James Haverstock, 19, of 1742 Kelley St., Upland, the driver of the motorcycle, and Jean Collins, 15, of 525 E. 14th St., Upland, his passenger, were both injured when the motorcycle crashed into the side of the pickup truck driven by Howard Shaw Morrison, 54, of 580 W. Arrow Highway, Upland. Haverstock was treated and released for minor injuries at Ontario Community Hospital while Miss Collins was admitted with numerous scrapes and bruises. She was listed in satisfactory condition this morning.

Police said the motorcycle was traveling south on Mountain Avenue when the truck apparently pulled out in front of them and was forced to pause for northbound traffic.

In Ontario, Donald Joseph Stillings, 37, of 9037 Whirlaway Court Alta Loma, was injured when his car was sideswiped by another car attempting to pass him on the right on Etiwanda Avenue near Jurupa St., in Ontario Sunday, police said.

Stillings was treated and released from Kaiser's Fontana Hospital a short time after the accident. Police said Stillings car was sideswiped by a car driven by James Kenneth Chapman, 53, of San Clemente. Chapman was not injured, but his car rolled twice after the initial impact.

Maritime Academy offering entrance exams Saturdays

Entrance exams will be given the first Saturday of each month from January to June at 9 a.m. at the California Maritime Academy in Vallejo.

High school seniors and graduates interested in the maritime industry, afloat or ashore, may sit for the exams. Preregistration is not necessary. There is no fee.

The academy is operated by the state to prepare men and women for service as officers for the American Merchant Marine.

The course of instruction is four years. Graduates receive federal licenses as merchant marine officers. They also receive B.S. degrees in nautical industrial technology or marine engineering technology. They qualify for commissions as ensigns in the Naval Reserve.

Costs of the program are shared by the state and the student.

Admission requirements are that students be unmarried U.S. citizens at least 17 but not older than 24 at the time of admission. This age limit is extended to 27 for veterans. They must be high school graduates and meet mental and physical requirements.

Those making application to the academy are not required to take the exams if they have already taken the SAT or ACT tests.

Additional information about the academy or the exams may be obtained by contacting the Director of Admissions, California Maritime Academy, Vallejo 94590.

Enrollment in Medicare open through March

Those who didn't sign up for Medicare medical insurance when they first became eligible, or who have once had the insurance and canceled it, may reenroll at any Social Security office through March 31, 1975.

A. Lorraine Brannen, Social Security district manager in Pomona, said Medicare medical insurance is offered automatically to those 65 or older who are eligible for Social Security benefits.

It also is available to disabled persons under 65 who have been entitled to monthly Social Security disability benefits for 24 consecutive months or more.

Mrs. Brannen said nine out of 10 people eligible are enrolled in the program.

Medicare medical insurance helps pay doctor bills and other medical expenses, and is the voluntary part of medicare. It is funded by individual premiums and federal revenues.

The basic premium is $6.70 a month through next June.

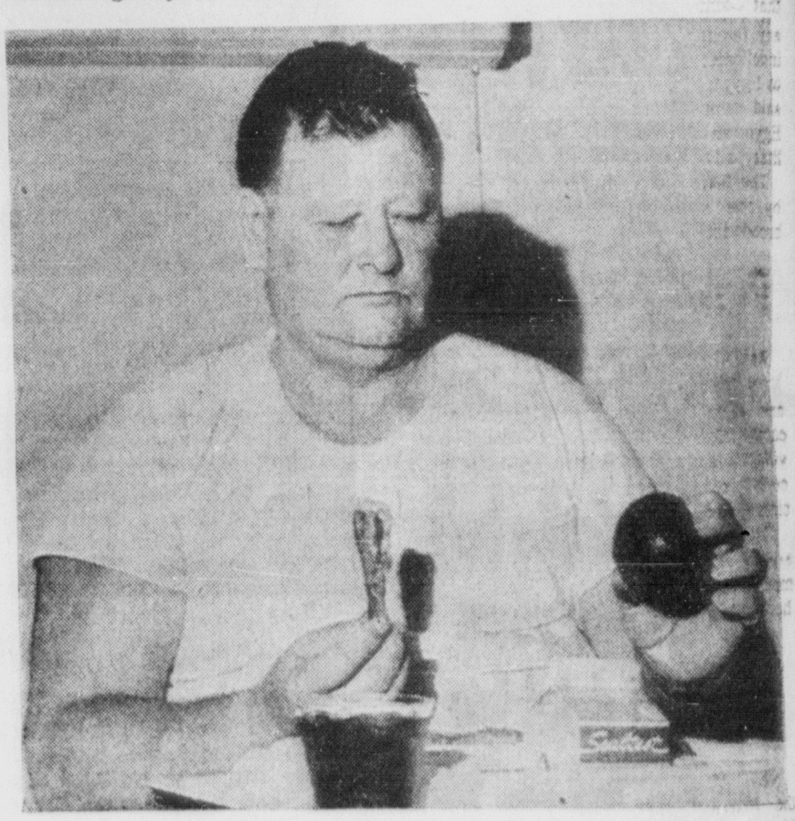

"Those who do not take the Medicare medical insurance when eligible, and delay signing up for more than a year, pay a higher premium," said Mrs. Brannen. "People who sign up and later cancel can re-enroll only once."

Hospital insurance is funded by Social Security contributions from workers, employers and self-employed people. People entitled to monthly Social Security benefits who are 65 or over, or who are disabled and have received monthly insurance without payment of any premium, Mrs. Brannen explained.

Those 65 and over who are not eligible for Social Security benefits can apply and get Medicare hospital insurance by paying a premium, continued Mrs. Brannen. The basic premium is $36 a month through next June. These persons also must sign up for the medical insurance, she said.

Medicare is administered by the Social Security Administration, an agency of the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

The Pomona Social Security office is at 445 E. Holt Ave., The telephone number is 629-4021.

stage. He has been visited daily by his wife of 40 years, Polly. A spokesman for Mills said the congressman will remain at Bethesda until the new Congress convenes Jan. 14.

"During the past several years, and most especially in the last year, I had scarcely noticed that my drinking habits had changed perceptively.

"I now realize, after several weeks of treatment by the doctors and soul-searching of my own, that I had developed a severe drinking problem, not as a daily drinker but as a periodic heavy drinker. I did not know that this pattern corresponds with what is known as alcoholism....

"I have come to a full understanding that alcoholism is a disease from which people by the thousands have recovered," Mills said, pledging "total abstinence."

Mills said he is lucky to be in good physical and mental condition, but that his illness "caused me to suffer blackouts from time to time —periods during which I have had no knowledge of what I was doing."

Those periods were brief and occurred only when he had drunk, Mills said, "but they do explain some of my recent activities."

Mills, 65, said he regrets the embarrassment he may have caused his family or his constituents and colleagues.

He said he will do all he can to help his successor as Ways and Means chairman, Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., and "I do ask that I be judged by my actions when I resume my seat in the House Jan. 14."

Mills said today's statement will be his last on the subject.

"I will not be discussing this matter further with press, radio and television," he said. "This is not a New Year's resolution. It is the considered decision and judgment of one who has been to the brink of destruction and has mercifully been preserved to serve my country and my loved ones to the best of my ability."

2 solons ask mandatory gasoline rationing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two energy experts in Congress say President Ford's call for voluntary conservation has failed and urge adoption of mandatory measures —including gasoline rationing —to solve the nation's energy difficulties.

"There are no quick solutions to our energy problems,'' said Rep. Mike McCormack, D-Wash. ''The only options we have are to conserve."

Rep. Henry S. Ruess, D-Wis., who heads a House subcommittee on Conservation and Natural Resources, said voluntary efforts to decrease consumption were not strong enough because "the good guys do the saving and those who don't care use up the energy."

The two Congressmen were interviewed on "NBC-TV's "Meet the Press."

Both lawmakers agreed a mandatory conservation program, including rationing of gasoline, was needed.

"I believe that we must embark on some sort of rationing program whereby luxury automobile driving is drastically cut down and ... gasoline guzzling automobiles are phased down and ultimately out," Ruess said.

"Unless we take conservation steps now, in the period before we can bring in additional new sources of energy, we're going to mortgage ourselves to the Arab states in a way unparalleled since the Barbary Pirates leveled tribute on the United States 150 years ago.

Rationing "is the only thing that will work," said McCormack, who heads an energy subcommittee of the House Science Committee.

Ford said in an interview that public cooperation "has not achieved all we feel is necessary. So there will be stronger measures."

However, he said he opposed a gasoline tax hike and rationing.

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (UPI) — Socialist Workers Party presidential hopeful Peter Camejo does not expect to win in 1976, but predicts a brighter future for his party because of the economic crisis.

Camejo, a 35-year-old antiwar activist, said Sunday night the nation's two major political parties would "blow apart in the face of the economic crisis," making way for the Socialist party as a major political force.

Camejo, in his first speech since being named the party's 1976 standard bearer Friday, said disaffection with the Democratic and Republican parties was at an all-time high because of Watergate and the economic crisis.

He told a public rally a the convention of the Young Socialist Alliance, the party's youth affiliate, that "the Democrats and Republicans have cornered the market on hypocrisy, double talk and cover-ups. One after another, their leaders and spokespeople turn out to be criminals and hypocrites."

Congress . . .

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Liberal House Democrats, bolstered by the votes of 75 incoming freshmen, plan to add more proposals to a package of congressional and party reforms already approved by the House.

Among the new reforms sought are the power to open House-Senate hearings to the public, the right to determine how much money will be shared with the Republicans to hire staff personnel and whether to allow proxy voting in committee meetings.

The Democrats should have a pretty easy time getting all three reforms through because of the results of last November's elections. Instead of 187 members, Republicans have just 144, and only 40 of the 60 conservative southern Democrats will be returning.

The original reform bill, which passed the full House in October, guaranteed the minority party one-third of a committee's funds for staff hiring and outlawed proxy voting from the floor.

STONE MOUNTAIN, Ga. (UPI) — The Ku Klux Klan plans to investigate school board members and textbook company executives in a West Virginia school book controversy. It says Communists are out to subvert American children with "obscene" books.

"In my opinion, it's Communists and Socialists who are trying to destroy the brains of our children," James R. Venable, Imperial Wizard of the National Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, said Sunday. "When you destroy the morals of a nation, you destroy the nation."

Venable said a KKK delegation will go to Charleston, W.Va., to begin an inquiry into the motives of publishers and school board members responsible for texts that have triggered parental protest against books being used in the public schools there.

"We're laying the blame on the boards of education," he said. "The most obscene literature is going to the little children of our country.

Brezhnev cancels Mideastern tour

By United Press International

The Soviet Union announced today that Communist party General Secretary Leonid I. Brezhnev has postponed indefinitely his scheduled January visit to Egypt, Syria and Iraq. Arab sources said cancellation of the visit followed Egyptian refusal to permit Soviet military advisers to return to Egypt.

The Soviet announcement was made by the Tass news agency and was broadcast by Moscow Radio, ending a six-day Russian news blackout on Brezhnev's plans to visit the Middle East. The Russians had reported on the current Moscow visit of Egyptian Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmi and new War Minister Mohamed Gamassy.

Tass said a new date for Brezhnev's Middle East visit would be announced later. The Soviet announcement confirmed reports by Arab news agencies of the postponement but gave no reason. Soviet announcements have stressed that the talks between the visiting Egyptians and the Kremlin had been friendly.

Diplomatic reports in London and Beirut said Brezhnev was prepared to replace the arms Egypt lost in the 1973 Yom Kippur War with Israel and had promised advanced MIG25 fighter planes and supersophisticated SAM missiles if Egypt would permit the return of Russian military advisers expelled by President Anwar Sadat in 1972.

Pakistan earthquake toll jumps to 4,000

RAWALPINDI, Pakistan (UPI) — More than 4,000 persons were killed and 15,000 others injured when an earthquake rumbled through mountain villages late Saturday in the northwest corner of Pakistan, government officials said here today.

The officials said the hardest hit area was centered around Patan, a mountain village 109 miles west of here. In all, the quake tore through eight villages, destroying life and property.

A massive relief operation launched under the personal direction of Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhuto continued today, but most land routes to the stricken area were blocked by debris and rocks torn up by the earthquake.

Army helicopters flew doctors, medicine, food and tents to northwestern Pakistan today to aid survivors of a weekend earthquake that took hundreds of lives.

Rescue and relief work was being carried out by civilian and military agencies, largely by airplanes and helicopters.

Still undecided on Vanderbilt death plunge

NEW YORK (UPI) — Police today hoped they could determine what an autopsy report did not —whether the death plunge of Amy Vanderbilt, America's First Lady of Etiquette, was an accident or suicide.

Dr. Yung Rho, the city's deputy chief medical examiner, said her death occurred "strictly as a result of the fall" from a second-story window in her Manhattan East Side apartment Friday, and that she could have fallen accidentally because of dizziness brought on by hypertension.

The report did not rule on whether Miss Vanderbilt jumped or fell.

Botulism kills 2 in family

NEW YORK (UPI) — Members of the Mitrione family gathered after Mama's funeral for dinner. They got together again Christmas Eve and Christmas Day, dined in sadness and spoke of better days.

Mrs. Maris Mitrione, 59, had died Dec. 22. An autopsy pinpointed the cause of death as botulism.

On Dec. 26, Mrs. Mitrione's daughter in law, also named Maria, became ill and was admitted to Jacobi Hospital in critical condition.

The young mother died of apparent botulism Sunday one week after her mother-in-law succumbed. Officials said they probably ate tainted mushrooms from a mixture canned by the elder woman.

A dozen relatives have also been hospitalized after eating portions of the same food.

Officials at Jacobi Hospital say Mrs. Maria Mitrione, 27, died from cardiorespiratory complications caused by poisoning.

According to officials, the elder Mrs. Mitrione prepared the Italian-style eggplant and mushroom mixture a few days before she died.

IRA protest

DUBLIN (UPI) — The rebel prisoners dropped their sticks, bottles and stones without a fight, but sang out songs as they marched unbowed to their cells.

The inmates ended a five-hour uprising at Ireland's top security prison Sunday night, releasing 16 captive guards when more than 100 riot police stormed a barricaded cellblock.

Police said the 140 rebels — all members of the extremist Provisional wing of the Irish Republican Army —went on a rampage to press for improved conditions at Portlaoise Prison, 50 miles south of Dublin.

Authorities said nobody was hurt in the brief prison uprising, but the rebel inmates extensively damaged one of the jail's wings.

Police said the prisoners began the rebellion during the afternoon, smashing furniture, ripping down lighting fixtures and breaking doors to barricade their cellblock.

The unarmed prisoners overpowered the 16 guards in the cellblock, but did not try to escape.

Viet tragedy

SAIGON (UPI) — A ferry carrying Mekong Delta villagers through a canal hit a huge mine, killing 22 civilians and wounding 22 others, the Saigon military command reported today.

The military command said the ferry exploded after striking the mine along a major inland waterway in Kien Tuong Province 52 miles west of Saigon.

A spokesman said the blast took place Saturday afternoon, but the report didn't reach Saigon until today.

The Saigon government blamed the Communists for the mining, one of the year's worst civilian war incidents. A spokesman said all the victims were civilians.

Oil power

PARIS (UPI) — Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi says Iran could become a major world power in 25 years, wielding the same economic strength as the United States or the Soviet Union.

"In 10 or 12 years Iran should be on the same level as the current European powers," the shah said told correspondents of the weekly Paris news magazine Le Point.

He said Iran could arrive in 25 years "at an even more complete blooming, with an agriculture and an industry reaching the maximal level, comparable to that of the world's most advanced countries."

The shah, speaking in his Palais de Niavaran residence in Tehran, said, however, he does not want to destroy the West in the process of increasing Iran's power.

"How can I wish the destruction of the Western world?" he said. "I belong to the world, regardless. That is why I help it as much as I can."

Laos rebels

VIENTIANE (UPI) — Fortythree Americans and others were airlifted from an embattled town in Laos today under an agreement between the coalition government and former CIA-sponsored guerrilla troops who seized the town six days ago.

The evacuees arrived in Vientiane aboard American aircraft after crossing the Mekong River into Thailand from the provincial capital of Ban Houei Sai in northern Laos in the opium-rich "golden triangle" area.

The group included 20 America government employes and dependents, as well as various other foreigners and Laotian employes.

"There is no law and order," said Jack Huxtable, 36, of Richfield Springs, N.Y., the head of U.S. Agency for International Development operations at Ban Houei Sai. "I am disappointed that the military and civilian authorities were not able to control the situation."

Huxtable said that despite denials that Communist Pathet Lao troops helped students and rebel troops take over the town in violation of the Laos ceasefire agreement, Communist troops were part of the invasion force.

"I've been in Laos for 10 years," said Huxtable. "I speak the language and I know their weapons and equipment. I saw them with my own eyes."

Man of year

NEW YORK (UPI) — Time magazine has named King Faisal of Saudi Arabia its "Man of the Year" for 1974 for his role in determining the price of oil.

Faisal was picked because he "was a principal actor in bringing about the quadrupled price of oil and now holds more power than any other leader to lower them or raise them anew," Time said Sunday.

The king's decisions on oil affected "the lives and pocketbooks of virtually every human being," Time said. It added that the "shrewd and dedicated king" played a key role in the "increasing cohesion an power of the Arab world."

"Both in his own right and as a symbol of the other newly powerful potentates of oil, Saudi Arabia's King Faisal is the 'Man of the Year,'" the magazine said.

JERUSALEM (UPI) — DeJean Replogle, an American teen-ager who lost her right leg during a pilgrimage to the Holy Land, smiled as she sat in her hospital bed propped up by pillows.

"I'm feeling better than I did yesterday and I pray to get better soon," the devout Baptist girl said Sunday. A few hours earlier, an intravenous feeding tube had been removed from her arm.

A spokesman at Hadassah Hospital said DeJean, who was wounded in an Arab guerrilla attack, is homesick for Florida but her condition "is improving all the time."

The 16-year-old Jacksonvile, Fla., girl welcomed well-wishers Sunday for the first time since her leg was amputated above the knee the day after Christmas.

Papadopoulos

ATHENS (UPI) — George Papadopoulos, the once-powerful military ruler now living in exile on a tiny Aegean island, will be tried next month on charges of high treason and insurrection. The maximum penalty is death.

Athens Appeals Court Judge George Voltis flew by helicopter to the island of Kea Sunday to read the charges to Papadopoulos and four of his top aides.

A court spokesman said the five men, leaders of a 1967 coup that brought seven years of military rule to Greece, would testify before an investigating magistrate on Jan. 15.

Under Greek law, insurrection carries the death penalty while high treason is punfshable by up to 20 years in prison.

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Marlon Brando wants to give back to the Indians at least part of America —his part. "Over my dead body," says his sister, who still lives on it.

Among the parcels, Brando listed the 40-acre farm where his sister, Mrs. Richard Loving of Mundelein, Ill., lives. She is co-owner and said flatly when told of her brother's intention, ''We are not giving this land away—there is no question about it."

She called the farm northwest of Chicago "the family homestead."

Brando announced Sunday he would give away his U.S. property beginning today. He planned to present 40 acres in northwestern Los Angeles County to Survival of American Indians.

'Ain't so good'

TUCKER, Ga. (UPI)—Rotund Junior Samples answered the telephone "Samples' Hospital" and allowed as how he hadn't had anything "fit to eat" since being hospitalized Dec. 16 for a blood condition.

The star of television's Hee Haw series said Sunday his doctor had placed him on a diet of "rabbit food" and no liquor. He's also suffering from high blood pressure and high cholesterol.

"I ain't so good I guess," said Samples. "The doctor said I had the highest cholesterol he'd ever heard of. They don't give me nothin' but lettuce, carrots and skim milk, and ever once in a while they throw in some boiled beef with no salt. It don't taste no better than it sounds."

Samples, who weighed 335 this time last year, has lost 16 pounds since being hospitalized —down from 308 to 292.

Pearlie May

DENVER (UPI) — Pearl Bailey is under observation today to see if she has suffered a heart attack, according to hospital officials.

"Miss Bailey remains in fair condition in the hospital's intensive care ward," a hospital spokesman said. "She is being monitored by the cardiac staff and by the latest equipment so that any irregularities which may occur can be dealt with immediately."

The spokesman said the 54-year-old Miss Bailey was being treated as if she had a heart attack. But officials of The Warehouse, where the singer was to have opened Saturday, said her illness was the result of exhaustion and the effect of Denver's mile-high altitude.

Heart attack kills No-Doz inventor

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Hugh T. Harrison, inventor of the stay-awake stimulant No-Doz, died last Tuesday of a heart attack, authorities said. He was 71.

The inventor's body was returned here Saturday night. Funeral services were pending.

Last February the bodies of Harrison's wife and stepson were found stuffed in the trunk of Mrs. Harrison's Cadillac.

She was the sister of former Federal Reserve Board Chairman Mariner Eccles and left her husband $800,000 in real estate and a quarter interest in an annual life income from a family trust valued at about $8 million.

Leroy Breckendridge, 26, Oakland, later was convicted of murdering the Piedmont socialite and her son.

Harrison was scheduled to go on trial next month on charges of embezzling $65,000 cash and securities from an Oakland widow, Mrs. Elsi Weitz.

He filed bankruptcy papers in Nevada last year, saying he had debts of $1,520,338 and assets of $1,063,915.

George Burns at Jack Benny funeral

'I can't imagine my life without him'

GEORGE BURNS BROKE DOWN

By VERNON SCOTT
UPI Hollywood Correspondent

CULVER CITY, Calif. (UPI) — His fellows said goodbye to Jack Benny Sunday with tears and gentle jokes he would have liked.

Men and women who came the route he did —from vaudeville circuits to national entertainment institutions — buried the comedian on a brilliantly sunny Sunday afternoon in a cemetery packed with celebrities, fans and emotion.

George Burns, Benny's best friend, broke down in sobs three sentences into his eulogy and could not finish. Bob Hope, who met Benny on Broadway 45 years ago, carried on, mixing gentle humor with his tributes.

"He was stingy to the end," Hope said. "He was only with us 80 years, and it wasn't enough."

Burns, who with his wife Gracie Allen, was one of Benny's fellow giants of the golden days of network radio in the 1930s and 1940s, said beforehand that he did not know if he could go through with his part of the eulogy. "I told that to Mary (Livingston, Benny's widow), and she asked me to try."

"What can I tell you about Jack? I've known him 55 years..." Burns broke. "I can't imagine my life without him," he sobbed and returned to his seat.

Police several times had to push back the crowd of 2,000 who came to see Benny buried at Hillside Memorial Cemetery.

Pallbearers included Frank Sinatra, Gregory Peck, Milton Berle and director Billy Wilder. Mourners included a roster of the most famous names in show business and politics including Gov. Ronald Reagan and former Sen. George Murphy, both former entertainers.

Also there was the old cast of Benny's radio show —Eddie "Rochester" Anderson who played the gravel-voiced butler, singer Dennis Day, musician Phil Harris, announcer Don Wilson and man-of-many-voices Mel Blanc, who did the "Anaheim,Azusa and Cucamonga" railroad announcer.

Mrs. Benny, his long time comedy partner and wife of 47 years, left the chapel but returned by the time the service began, sitting in her car to compose herself with the daughter, Joan, 30. She had said earlier, after Benny died Thursday night of a surprise cancer attack at 80, that "In all the years we were together, he never gave me one bad day, not one bad moment."

Hope said Benny was revered as a genius by other comedians for his flawless sense of timing, but that Benny finally made a mistake. "His timing was all wrong. He left us all too soon."

Hope said that "If there's a Mt. Rushmore for humanitarians, the first stone face might easily resemble him. And if a stone could talk, it would say 'Well'," a reference to Benny's ability to draw huge laughs with a silent pause and then that oft exasperated word.

"How do you say goodby to a man who was not just a good friend but a national treasure?" Hope asked.

"No one will ever replace Jack Benny."

Six believed lost in ocean plane crash

HALF MOON BAY, Calif. (UPI) — A couple and their four children were apparently lost at sea when their small plane crashed in strong winds and rain, the Coast Guard said Sunday.

The pilot of the twin-engine Piper Cheroke was identified as Daniel Sweetland, 28, operator of the Sweetland Ambulance Service in Kelso, Wash. He and his family were en route to Mexico when the aircraft disappeared from radar screens Friday.

The Coast Guard suspended search operations Sunday after a small fishing vessel found a six-foot-long wing tip and a starboard light in the ocean about two miles off Point Montara.

A Coast Guard spokesman said the wreckage appeared to be part of the missing plane.

BRUSSELS (UPI) — President Nixon's resignation and other Watergate developments were chosen as the most dramatic news story of 1974 by editors in Europe, Africa and the Middle East.

In an annual poll conducted by United Press International, editors chose the world economic crisis and the energy crisis as the most significant news stories of the year.

The Cyprus crisis, marked by the overthrow of Archbishop Makarios as president, the Turkish invasion of the island and Makarios' return, tied with the coup in Portugal for second place in the headline category.

The Western world's slide into its worst economic crisis in years was selected by just a two vote margin over the energy crisis as the most significant story of the year. The Nixon resignation ranked third in significance in the poll.

European results for top headline stories of 1974:

1. Nixon resignation, Ford becomes president, Ford's pardon of Nixon, other Watergate developments.
2. (Tie) Cyprus: Coup, Turkish invasion.
3. Portuguese coup, granting of independence to colonies.
4. The energy crisis.
5. Fall of the Greek junta.
6. The world economy.
7. German spy scandal, resignation of Willy Brandt as Chancellor.
8. Death of French President Georges Pompidou, election of Valery Giscard d'Estaing as his successor.
9. The Middle East.
10. Haile Selassie deposed as emperor of Ethiopia.

On Broadway

There's 'Good News' tonight!

By FREDERICK M. WINSHIP

NEW YORK (UPI) — The good news about "Good News" is that it has brought Alice Faye, the former screen and television star, to Broadway in a likeable revival of a 1927 musical that is designed to ride the tide of nostalgia for a lengthy run.

"Good News" comes to New York after nearly a year of engagements across the country by courtesy of Harry Rigby, the resuscitator of such golden oldies as "No, No Nanette" and "Irene". It opened at the St. James Theater Monday night to an enthusiastic audience that gave the now gray-haired Miss Faye and a large and excellent cast a standing ovation.

The musical by the late Buddy DeSylva, Lew Brown and Ray Henderson is as far removed from intellectual stimulation as any of the scores of stage and screen plots about college campus life that flourished in the '20s, '30s, '40s and even into the '60s. "Good News" has to be enjoyed on the level of its memorable popular tunes, bright staging, and energetic dancing-singing cast, or not at all.

Who can really find fault with a show that offers such classics as "The Best Things in Life Are Free", "Button Up Your Overcoat", "Lucky in Love", "You're the Cream in My Coffee," "Varsity Drag," "Together", "Keep Your Sunny Side Up," and "Life Is Just a Bowl of Cherries". Even Miss Faye, who was never much of a dramatic actress, can make a memorable statement with material like this.

When she is strutting her stuff in her Donald Brooks lavender-and-silver sequined gown, her sooty eyelashes fluttering, her pearly smile warming the whole theater, Miss Faye restates an era of the American theater that is eternally fascinating. But she is a performer that needs strong support, which she received from her co-star Gene Nelson in the role taken by John Payne on the pre-Broadway tour.

Miss Faye plays a professor of astronomy whose youthful romance with a college football hero, now the campus athletic coach, is revived in a simplistic plot revolving around Tait College's gridiron showdown with Colson College. Nelson's ebullient singing-dancing performance is a perfect foil for her more low-keyed, offhand impersonation of a woman who is at once decorous and vulnerable.

Backing up the stars are a fabulously talented young cast including Scott Stevenson and Joseph Burke, as a football star, Stubby Kaye as the football trainer, Barbara Lail as the ingenue, Tommy Breslin as the comic Freshman, and Jana Robbins as the vamp.

Garry Marshall's adaptation is set in the 1930s to take advantage of more varied musical and dance moods. Donald Oenslager's settings, recreated from originals that were destroyed by fire while the show was on tour in California, seemed weak in comparison to Donald Brooks' brilliant costuming— plaid woolens, jazzy sweaters, satiny underwear, ruffled prom gowns, knickers and pleated skirts.

Michael Kidd's direction emphasizes frenetic activity on the stage at all times, suitable to an era when campus life supposedly stressed fun and games—football games—almost to the exclusion of academic pursuits. We all know the show is only a half truth, but that's all nostalgia ever is. "Good News" at the St. James leaves today's troubled world far, far in the future for two generally happy hours.

Players to present 'Everywoman'

The Four Colleges Players of Claremont will present "Everywoman," a long one-act play by Pitzer College student Glenda Raikes, in the Strut and Fret Theater, Balch Hall, Scripps College, at 8 p.m. Jan. 16-22. Admission is $1.

The play, about woman's search for identity in America, will be directed by Miss Raikes under the supervision of drama professor Jesse Swan.

Ruth Fisher plays Everywoman, Ruth Howell plays God, and Michael Rozensweig portrays Death. Others in the cast are John Harnagel, Brian Marshall, Terry Miller, Liza Dozier and Amy Cochran.

The production is by Bruce Bidlack, lighting; Jim Klessig, sound, and Perry Jamieson, sets.

"Everywoman," according to Miss Raikes, was inspired by the medieval morality play, "Everyman." It attempts not only to laud and attack the Women's Liberation movement, but to reveal today's society.

"Women's lib is an advertising hoax thrust on women," says the playwright. "What's happening is that women are becoming like men rather than developing their own identities. When they started complaining, men gave them money, jobs and a bit of power to quiet them down.

"My play is about a woman politician who began as a lawyer. She falls prey to the same influences as most men politicians and, as a result, the woman God in the audience is compelled to challenge her. The play goes on from there."

But what will fuel power plants of future?

Electricity playing more critical role

WASHINGTON (UPI) — As the flow of oil and gas inevitably dwindles, Americans can expect electricity to assume a critical role in their lives. But what will fuel the electrical power plants of the future?

Scientists and government planners generally agree that conservation will help ease the energy crunch for a while, and coal will help for the next two or three decades, but that a long-term solution will mean reliance on electricity.

It is not the what, but the how, that bothers them.

The answer seemed easy a few years ago, when scientists looked confidently toward nuclear fission and development of an advanced breeder-type reactor to meet growing demands for electrical power.

Conventional nuclear reactors use no more than 2 per cent of the energy potential in uranium, and the Atomic Energy Commission estimates that if the nuclear industry grows as expected, they would exhaust known low cost uranium reserves within the next half-century.

Breeder reactors, however, convert abundant forms of nonfissionable uranium into fissionable plutonium, making the breeder 100 times more fuel efficient than present reactors.

Breeders thus offer a virtually unlimited fuel source, and nuclear power plants still rate top priority in the Project Independence research effort to make the United States self - sufficient in energy.

But the breeder is coming under attack as too costly and unsafe. Plutonium is one of the most poisonous substances known, and a few pounds is all that is needed to make a crude atomic weapon.

There also is increasing competitive pressure from advocates of solar energy, who say it has the potential of producing electricity safely at prices lower than many energy experts had expected.

The issue of the nuclear breeder power plant is likely to come to a head in 1975. Decision-making will bear on a review of the entire program by the General Accounting Office of Congress, an AEC "white paper" justifying the effort, and a reworked version of a preliminary AEC environmental impact statement that got a failing grade from the Environmental Protection Agency.

The newly created Nuclear Regulatory Commission, one of the successors to the soon-to-be-disbanded AEC, will act in 1975 on a preliminary request to begin work on a prototype breeder generating plant at Oak Ridge, Tenn.

Rep. Chet Holifield, D-Calif., a veteran member of the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy, says the Oak Ridge project is the crucial test of the nation's commitment to an all-out energy program.

The fossil fuel alternatives for fueling power plants seem grimly inadequate.

Dr. Alvin M. Weinberg, director of energy research and development for the Federal Energy Administration, stressed recently that something other than oil and gas will be needed after the turn of the century.

To compensate for expected shortages in petroleum reserves, Weinberg said, Americans will have to rely heavily on producing synthetic oil and gas from coal, and squeezing oil from shale.

He estimated that even if the annual increase in demand for energy drops to 1.6 per cent from its present level of 4 to 5 per cent, with greater dependence on electricity, it still would require production of 3.5 billion tons of coal annually by the year 2050 to meet the demand for synthetic oil and gas.

The United States now mines about 600 million tons a year.

"If there is any validity to what we are saying, then the demand for synthetics will probably be greater than we will in fact be able to supply," Weinberg said.

"Therefore, the society will have to make its peace with moving towards nonfossil energy sources" in the next 50 years or so, he said.

Nuclear and solar energy are the only nonfossil sources known to be able to generate electricity on a large scale, said Weinberg, former director of the Oak Ridge National Laboratory.

The same cannot be said for geothermal energy, the extraction of underground steam or hot water. And producing electricity through nuclear fusion, a controlled version of the process by which the hydrogen bomb explodes, remains remains a difficult, unproven task, Weinberg said, and "we can't count on it."

Weinberg said electricity produced from solar energy would be very expensive, given present technology, while nuclear fission would be comparatively cheap but somewhat hazardous.

"Some people say there's only one way to go under that circumstance —take the more expensive course," he said. "I don't think that's the right course of action, but that's a very heavy question which will certainly have to be settled over the next few years."

Dr. Lloyd Herwig, director of solar energy research for the National Science Foundation, says conversion of sunlight to heat and air conditioning offers great potential.

And he believes another five years and $1 billion in refinements could greatly reduce the cost of solar produced electricity. The current federal energy budget allocates only $50 million for solar research, while $724.7 million is committed to nuclear fission research.

Nationwide, 55 conventional nuclear power plants are licensed to operate. Though not all are working, they represent 7.8 per cent of U.S. generating capacity. The AEC expects nuclear reactors to be generating at least 60 per cent of the nation's electrical power by the year 2000, with breeders carrying most of the load.

The key to the breeder program, and the source of some of its current problems, is the prototype generating plant to be built on a wooded tract encircled on three sides by a horseshoe bend in the Clinch River on the western edge of Oak Ridge.

The estimated cost of the plant, designed to demonstrate the commercial feasibility of breeders, has increased from $699 million in 1972 to $1.7 billion. Construction is expected to be completed in early 1983, more than three years behind schedule.

The Oak Ridge project has been questioned in reports by the General Accounting Office, a Ford Foundation energy study and two researchers at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

But Dr. Dixy Lee Ray, the AEC chairman, said her agency is reviewing the breeder program so it will command the support "which I am now convinced it does deserve...We believe that a breeder program is essential."

Anthropologist Margaret Mead, president-elect of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, said in a recent magazine article that the breeder program involves "risks so extraordinary that every citizen in the nation should have a voice in deciding if this is the road to energy independence we —or anyone — should take."

DAR Council schedules meeting

The Southern Council meeting of the Daughters of the American Revolution will be held on Jan. 21 at the Huntington Sheraton Hotel in Pasadena.

Mrs. Muriel Prigg, regent of the Pomona DAR Chapter, announces that reservations are due by Jan. 14.

The Pomona Chapter marked Christmas with a musical program at the Assembly of God Church. Members took gifts to the meeting for delivery to patients at March Air Force Base Hospital.

Musical program is planned by Ebell

Pomona Ebell has scheduled a musical program for the first tea of the new year.

Violinist Daniel Strang and pianist Carol Hendrixson will perform at the 1:30 p.m. program in the Ebell Clubhouse on Friday.

Mr. Strang, son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl D. Strang of La Verne, received his bachelor of music degree in September from Indiana University where he was a scholarship recipient.

He has studied violin with Elizabeth Mills, Paul Maka Nowitzky, Berl Senofsky and Josef Gingild. During the summer of 1972, Mr. Strang was selected to play in the World Orchestra in Germany and the Gershwin Orchestra at the Olympic Games.

Miss Hendrixson, the accompanist, holds a bachelor's degree from Scripps College where she was a student of Lee Pattison. She studied chamber music and accompanying with Jaschi Veisse and Cesare Pascarella. She has instructed music at local schools and now teaches in Pasadena.

The oil paintings of Mrs. Jacques Griset will be on exhibit in the clubhouse during January. She has studied with all of the Ebell Club art class instructors.

Major economic surgery needed in '75

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Like a team of medical specialists in white coats, economists have been examining the sick U.S. economy in recent weeks, thumping here, probing there, looking for evidence of life.

The patient is listless, and the vital signs are faltering.

The economists' prescription: major surgery early in 1975, followed by several months of recovery in the intensive care unit.

"It's a bleaker picture than at any time since the Great Depression," says Walter Heller, a University of Minnesota professor who was chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers in the Kennedy administration.

Heller's gloom has seeped into the White House, where some administration economists are beginning to say that President Ford's hands-off approach to inflation, recession and energy shortages is simply too weak a medication for an economy that is on the critical list.

Ford has hinted broadly at a major change in policy soon, in which the recession would take inflation's place as "public enemy No. 1."

The President has rejected drastic remedies or "quick fixes," but he told a Dec. 12 meeting of the Business Council, chief executives of more than 100 of the leading U.S. corporations, he was preparing several new economic proposals for Congress to consider in January.

Ford already has agreed to a bigger, more expensive program of public service jobs for the unemployed than he proposed earlier, and Treasury Secretary William E. Simon noted in a recent television interview: "We must change our policies to adapt to what is going on in the real world."

Ford has been bracing the public for the economic plunge that is happening much quicker than expected, and which Simon predicts might last longer than any of the five previous postwar recessions.

"We are going to take some lumps and we are going to take some bumps," Ford said Dec. 2. And he told the Business Council what no administration spokesman dared say during 1974 election campaign: "We are in a recession."

When a Republican President says that before a room full of corporate bluebloods, the country is in rough shape.

All the statistical signs agree with Ford's diagnosis.

Dramatic production cutbacks and job layoffs in the auto industry have been echoed in smaller industries across the country.

Unemployment now threatens to reach 7 per cent of the labor force early in 1975 instead of mid-summer, as the administration had expected. The jobless rate jumped from 6 to 6.5 per cent in November alone.

"The odds now are 5 to 1 that it's too late to prevent 7.5 per cent, and even money that we'll hit 8 per cent," says Robert R. Nathan, a prominent Washington economic consultant.

Meanwhile, industrial and utility production plummeted 2.3 per cent in November, the sharpest monthly decline in four years and the fourth drop in five months. As retail sales drop off, manufacturers are starting to dip into inventories built up as a hedge against rising prices materials, and this cuts the sales of their suppliers.

"There's no end in sight," laments Nat Goldfinger, chief economist for the AFL-CIO. "I think we're in for hard times for quite a long time to come, on the basis of how things have been permitted to deteriorate."

Now for the good news.

First, the recession is unlikely for several reasons to sink into a 1930s-style depression.

Such safeguards as bank depositors' insurance and investor protection in the event of a brokerage firm's failure were unknown four decades ago. Workers today enjoy the widespread cushion of unemployment compensation, and many have "depression-proof" jobs in government.

Furthermore, there is little chance the government would refuse to spend its way out of a high-unemployment recession, especially with a solid Democratic majority in Congress.

Second, there are signs the stratospheric inflation rate is beginning to wane. This and some actual price cuts will be one of the surprises of 1975, according to Norma Pace, economist for the American Paper Institute in New York.

"It's starting at the wholesale level and will gradually move out to the retail level," she predicts. "Gas prices are down a little and heating oil prices won't be up too much. The big unknown is food prices."

Beryl Sprinkel, executive vice president and economist of Harris Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago, adds: "I'm very optimistic on the inflation front. I expect we'll move from double digit to 5 or 6 per cent by the end of next year."

Third, the hard-hit housing industry is showing signs of a small comeback in 1975. "The mortgage markets are beginning to improve already, at least in Chicago," Sprinkel says. "By late 1975, there will be lots of mortgage money available at more favorable terms and interest rates."

Economist Michael Sumichrast of the National Association of Homebuilders is cheered by a significant drop in prices for lumber, plywood and copper tubing.

Also, he said, price increases for new homes and land have eased, and contractors are lowering their bids to try to stay in business, even if it eventually means taking a smaller profit.

New York's biggest financial institution, First National City Bank, recently defended Ford against criticism of his go-easy inflation battle plan, saying tougher measures would have made the recession even worse.

"The conclusion is likely to be, in retrospect, that the administration was right to give existing policies enough time to work," the bank said.

But the optimists —and the President's allies —seem to form a distinct minority.

The Conference Board, a New York business advisory group, believes the economic decline will be gradual, with a lengthy period at the low point, and a slow recovery starting in late summer of 1975.

"The psychological depressants of high inflation rates have now been joined by the overriding depressant of business cycle uncertainty and job insecurity," says Albert T. Sommers, the board's chief economist.

Industrialist Henry Ford II urged a 10 per cent tax cut in 1975, a new Reconstruction Finance Corp. to help capital starved companies and banks, and a boost in either the gasoline tax or the excise tax on petroleum.

"Washington must take steps that will persuade the people that the nation still has control of its fate and is not drifting helplessly into deeper and deeper trouble," he said.

Economist Nathan says the President might be acting too late. "Anything he does now or in January or February will have little impact before May or June," he said.

Nathan also saw ominous inflationary overtones in the recent pattern of new wage contracts, reflecting workers' efforts to catch up with the soaring cost of living.

Between July and September, new three-year contracts contained average first-year increases of 11.1 per cent in wages and fringe benefits, double the rise of a year ago. This means "you've got a spiral going," Nathan said, with employers raising prices higher and higher to cover new wage costs.

Heller says Ford and his advisers "are living in a dream world...now's the time we can pump some stimulus into the economy without having more than a miniscule effect on inflation."

If Ford decides on a tax cut and a boost in public service jobs and Congress approves them quickly, Heller believes the economic slump could bottom out in the July-September quarter, but any delay could prolong the upswing until the end of 1975.

Okra seeds: new protein source?

KINGSTON, R.I. (UPI) — Two University of Rhode Island researchers searching for new sources of protein believe that okra seeds could serve as an alternate to soybeans, the most common protein substitute for meat.

"People tend to think of okra like string beans, something to eat in the immataure green pod stage," said Spiros M. Constantinides, professor of food and nutrition. "But if the pods are allowed to ripen, there are big seeds which can be dried, pressed for oil and ground into flour."

He said the mature seed of the okra plant is superior in nourishment to most other frequently eaten seeds.

Constantinides said animals fed okra flour showed an excellent pattern of growth in recent experiments. He said the the food was efficient, that it could replace soybeans in animal feed and as a protein supplement in food products such as noodles, soups and dry mixes.

Okra, a kind of hibiscus closely related to cotton, is grown in large amounts in the southern United States. Its pods range from four inches to a foot in length and are generally cooked and canned when young and tender.

Constantinides and graduate student Pavols A. Karakoltsidis were among the first to study okra seed as a food and discussed their findings at a recent International Congress of Food Science and Technology in Madrid.

"Okra grows in a semiarid climate which is found in many parts of the world including most of the developing nations," Constantinides said. "The yield per acre is as good as soybeans, it doesn't demand as much fertilizer and two crops can be grown every year."

About Headaches That Ache Here, Here And Here

By DR. W. P. HELZER, D.C.

I have headaches . . . here, here, here and here. That's not a migraine is it, Doc?

Probably not.

But if it's a chronic condition. They can be just as painful, just as unbearable and present just as serious problems to a patient's well-being.

A patient who can 'put his finger on his headache' is very possibly suffering from a cervical headache. Frequently they become chronic conditions and affect a person almost as regularly as the sun rises and sets.

Dr. Wes Helzer D.C.

The general pattern of the cervical headache pain is that it is present in the morning, subsides during the day and recurs a few hours in late afternoon. It is accompanied by tender 'spots' in the scalp and neck.

Cervical headache pain is located in the back of the head and upper neck and radiates forward to the temple. Occasionally the pain is referred to the eye. Less frequently burning pain is experienced across the shoulders and upper back.

What causes a cervical headache?

Most are due to irritation to the upper spinal nerves as they pass through small partially occluded openings in the spine near the base of the skull. The irritated nerves then pass through the soft tissues of the scalp where they are compressed to the point of pain.

The irritation to these upper spinal nerves can be caused by a fall or jolt to the head, neck or back (and commonly caused in auto accidents); through hereditary spinal defects; or from constant muscular tension due to stress brought on by the fast pace of modern day living.

By the very nature of the conditions that cause cervical headaches, they virtually always become chronic problems if left untreated.

And the difficulties generally do not stop with a daily headache either. Recurring headaches cause nervous tension that in turn can develop into chronic nervousness, digestive problems and irregularity or insomnia.

Individuals with headaches and tender 'spots' in the scalp and neck should seek immediate treatment and care. And headache pills and drugs are not the answer.

You must remember, pain pills sold across the counter offer, at best, "temporary relief," if any at all, and frequently upset the stomach and bring on nervousness. And, over a long haul, they can cost literally a fortune.

Headaches due to irritation of the upper spinal nerves usually respond readily to the specialized care offered by the Doctor of Chiropractic.

Quite honestly, our goal is the permanent correction of a headache problem. It's a joyous day for both Doctor and the patient who no longer has a headache he can put his finger on.

Some claim another war in Mideast 'inevitable'

TEL AVIV (UPI) — Mideast leaders on both sides agree that renewed fighting between Arabs and Israelis may come within six months if there is no progress in settling conflicting claims to the Biblical land of Palestine.

Little more than a year after their last battle, armies are ready on the cease-fire lines with new Soviet and American weapons that will make the next war bloodier than ever. Military experts believe that Israel and Syria now have military capabilities one-third greater than before.

The success or failure of great diplomatic exertions, mainly by Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, is not only crucial for peace in the Middle East, but also for the economic future of many nations dependent on Arab oil supplies. Kissinger has tried to establish a process of peace-making in which both sides make gradual concessions that are impossible to achieve in one-shot negotiations on an overall settlement.

In the process Israeli and Arab officials have met, in Geneva, across a negotiating table for the first time since 1949, and agreed to separate their forces in the Sinai and Golan Heights. While these diplomatic successes have kept the cease-fire lines quiet for 13 months, they have not removed the basic causes of the Arab-Israeli dispute.

In the Arab view, the cause of the dispute is Israel's continued occupation of Arab lands taken by force. From Israel's viewpoint, it is the Arabs' refusal to recognize the Jewish state as a fixture in the Middle East entitled to secure and defensible borders.

Many Arabs and Israelis say Kissinger's chances are slim for negotiating a lasting peace. Some say he has no chance at all and that another war is inevitable.

In any case, both Arab and Israeli leaders say Israel's best chance of achieving progress toward peace is with Egypt. War is most likely to begin on the Golan Heights front where Israel and Syria are less willing to make territorial compromises.

Israel mobilized army reserves last November and put Golan Heights forces on full alert because of military command suspicions about Syrian intentions.

Within two days, the war scare passed and the following week Syria renewed the mandate allowing U.N. peacekeeping troops to police for another six months the Golan Heights lines.

"The circle of hostility is widening," said an Israeli military commentator, Amnon Rubenstein. "Weapons are growing in quantity and quality. The speed of military rehabilitation is dizzying. As a result, we may expect a chain of wars at increasingly shorter intervals, with the power of destruction growing in frightening proportions."

Kissinger's original plan called for Israel to negotiate with Egypt, Syria and Jordan over the return of lands it captured in the 1967 war. Israel was to gradually withdraw from the Sinai, part of the Golan Heights and parts of the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River. Israel was to receive Arab assurances of peaceful existence behind recognized borders.

But the scheme was sidetracked in October by the Arab heads of state meeting at Rabat, Morocco. They voted to recognize Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization as sole representative of the Palestinian people and gave it exclusive right to establish a Palestinian state on any land given up by Israel on the West Bank or the Gaza Strip.

The Rabat decisions removed Jordan's King Hussein from the negotiating arena, at least for the time being, and resulted in a stalemate over the West Bank because Israel refuses to deal with the PLO, which Israelis call a bunch of murderers

There weeks later, at U.N. invitation, Arafat called in the General Assembly for a secular Palestinian state that would include land that is Israel. His presence confirmed in Israeli minds their long-held belief that the Arab guerrilla movement would settle for nothing less than the destruction of the Jewish state.

Arafat's U.N. appearance and the subsequent General Assembly resolution granting the PLO observer status gave the Palestinians something they had not had in 27 years —a leader recognized by most of the world. Israel remained firm in the position that negotiations over the West Bank can go forward only with Jordan or an entity made up of West Bank notables.

Anxious to renew the momentum toward peace in the wake of the Rabat decisions, Kissinger visited the region for the eighth time in a year early in November to see what could be salvaged.

After meeting with Rabin, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Syrian President Hafez Assad, Kissinger said he was encouraged to persevere. Arab commentators believe that a second-stage military disengagement might come between Israel and Egypt and possibly even Syria. But they look to a resumption of the Geneva conference as the only hope for an overall settlement.

This also is the view being pressed strongly by the Soviet Union, cosponsor along with the United States of the Geneva conference.

The Arabs are relying on the resumption of the Geneva conference because they would be able to line up a solid bloc of demands that Israel comply with U.N. resolution 242 of 1967 which, in the Arab view, calls for total Israeli withdrawal from all Arab land it captured in 1967.

For these reasons, Rabin says that resumption of the Geneva conference would ruin all chances for a negotiated political settlement in the Middle East and open the way for another war.

Whether or not the Geneva conference is reopened, Arab and Israeli sources say they expect the first half of next year to be devoted to peace negotiations. Should these negotiations fail to achieve progress, the sources say, a war could erupt at any moment in the latter half of the year.

A war could result in another Arab oil embargo like the one imposed in 1973. It also could draw the United States and Soviet Union into direct confrontation.

Underscoring this tension over oil, the United States has sent an aircraft carrier and two missile-carrying destroyers into the Persian Gulf in what the Pentagon called a "familiarization" cruise.

The possibility of direct big power confrontation in the Middle East gained credence at the end of the 1973 war when the Israelis and Arabs fought on past the U.N. cease-fire deadline. At the time, the United States put its military, including its strategic nuclear forces, on high alert to counter what was believed to be a unilateral Soviet move to intervene.

During 1974, at least 60 Israelis were killed in guerrilla attacks. Israel struck back after each raid, usually at guerrilla bases and staging areaes in southern Lebanon.

Arab leaders have repeatedly voiced fears that Israel might occupy southern Lebanon in an attempt to put a final end to the guerrilla problem. If it did, yet another knot would be added to the complex tangle that faces the peace negotiators.

Happy days again for gold refiners

NEW YORK (UPI) — No matter what else happens when it becomes legal for Americans to own gold on Dec. 31, for precious metals refiners it should be "happy days are here again."

The gold business has been bad this year for companies like Engelhard Industries, Handy & Harman, Consolidated Refining, and Sterndent. Their customers, the jewelers, the dentists and industrial users of gold, cut their purchases by more than 25 per cent as the free market price of gold soared to an average of $159 an ounce.

But after New Year's day the American public, which has been forbidden to own monetary gold or gold ingot for investment for 40 years, is expected to buy several million ounces. The U.S. Treasury alone expects to sell 2 million ounces of gold to the public.

If Americans buy gold at the rate the Japanese and Canadians did in 1973, their purchases could run from 2.5 million to 3.5 million ounces next year— between $500 million and $1 billion.

Rudy Hanau, executive vice president of Consolidated Refining Co., Mamaroneck, N.Y., said nearly all the gold sold to the public would have to go through the hands of the refiners to be reprocessed into marketable sizes and 99.9 per cent standard purity. Even the two million ounces of gold the Treasury plans to sell is not of standard purity. It averages 99.5 per cent and it will be sold in lots only fairly large investors can buy. If they want to resell it to the public, much of it would have to be re-refined.

Nobody really knows what will happen to the price of gold in 1975. The free market price in Europe has soared to record levels above $190 an ounce as the New Year's deadline in the United States approached. Hanau said it is unlikely the price will drop enough to stop the jewelers, dentists, and industrial users from searching for cheaper metals to substitute so that market will not grow much in 1975 and may even decline.

But Hanau belives enough Americans will be eager to own gold to keep the refiners extremely busy for quite a spell. He sees a three-tier public market for gold in the United States.

He expects the development of a gift market for small wafers—a quarter to one ounce, to be sold through department stores or jewelry shops with a markup in line with traditional retail markups.

Hanau says the second tier will be small investors buying ingots of five to 15 ounces, mainly through banks.

The third level will be the big investors hedging against inflation, who will buy large gold ingots through banks or brokerage houses. He said there also will be more gold mutual funds —funds that invest in metallic gold and then sell shares to the public.

Hanau also believes firms that mint gold commemorative medallions and gold platters will prosper as the refiners will by the legalization of gold holdings in America. He mentioned Franklin Mint, Royal Canadian Mint, Johnson Mathey Co. in England and Canadian Copper Refiners, Ltd.

Jim: "West opened the queen of diamonds and continued with the jack. South thought and thought and finally played low from dummy, whereupon East had to play the ace. Then East led back a club and South was in business."

Oswald: "He led a diamond to dummy's king and ran clubs. When he came down to four cards he was looking at the four sevens. West was holding the ace of spades; the king-queen of hearts and ten of diamonds and dummy the ace-jack-ten of hearts and king of spades. East was holding his head."

Jim: "The author called the hand 'The dwarf sevens.' When South led the seven of clubs West was squeezed. He did the best he could and chucked the ace of spades, whereupon South chucked dummy's king; led the spade seven and claimed since West couldn't hold on to two hearts and a diamond."

State anglers, hunters to benefit from U.S. aid for fish, wildlife

P-B Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — California's more than 2.8 million licensed fishermen and hunters will benefit, because of the sportsmen equipment they have bought, from the $3.1 million in federal aid funds for fish and wildlife restoration and hunter safety programs in the state.

The funds, which are part of the $70.3 million Federal Aid to Fish and Wildlife Restoration Program for use in fiscal 1975, are being apportioned for distribution to the 50 states, Puerto Rico, American Samoa, Guam, and the Virgin Islands by the Department of Interior.

California, which has 2,199,190 licensed fishermen and 641,319 licensed hunters, will receive $3,150,510 in funds. A total of $2,171,510 is for wildlife restoration, $136,500 is for hunter safety programs, and $842,500 is for fish restoration, according to Interior's Fish and Wildlife Service figures.

The funds are raised through excise tax receipts collected on hunting and fishing equipment nationwide, according to Marsha Mulligan of the Fish and Wildlife Service.

"The government puts a tax on people who will receive benefits from the (fish and wildlife) programs," she said.

According to Mulligan, the nationwide program breaks-down as follows:

Wildlife restoration funds are raised with money from an 11 per cent excise tax on sporting arms and ammunition and a 10 per cent tax on pistols and revolvers and are distributed based on the number of hunting license holders in each state. They are used on state approved wildlife projects such as the acquisition, development, and management of habitat for game species.

Distribution of hunter safety funds is based on a state's general population. They are used for state hunter edcuation programs such as the operation of public target programs. Funds for this program may also be used for wildlife restoration projects.

Fish restoration funds are raised from a 10 per cent excise tax on fishing equipment and are distributed according to the number of fishing license holders in each state plus the area of each state. With these funds, states purchase, rehabilitate and maintain lakes and lake facilities for fishermen and perform research to aid in the management of sport fisheries.

The wildlife restoration and hunter safety programs fall under the Pittman-Robertson act of 1937, while the Fish restoration programs are granted under funds from the 1950 Dingel-Johnson Act.

Christmas Seal donations off over last year

Now at the $850,000 figure—$80,000 down from this time last year—the Christmas Seal campaign in Los Angeles County still is urgently in need of funds to meet ongoing programs attempting to cope with respiratory diseases.

Peter D. McDermott, president of the Lung Association of Los Angeles County, said the Christmas Seals provide more than 90 per cent of all funds for the Lung Association in its TB and breathing tests, asthma services, emphysema clubs, public and professional health education and support of medical research.

Many residents of Los Angeles County who have not yet mailed in their Christmas Seal contributions now are receiving reminder requests.

McDermott said a second gift is being encouraged by the Christmas Seal agency.

Opening 1975 with an election

The last special election in Pomona, to fill a seat on the city council, brought out about 17 per cent of the qualified voters. A shabby showing on the part of voters but about par for this type of election.

We can anticipate a similar voter performance on Jan. 7 when Pomonans and other voters throughout the Mt. San Antonio College District, totaling some 200,000 persons, have the opportunity to participate in a special election to fill a vacancy on the college's governing board.

When veteran board member Lance Smith died a few months ago the remaining board members sought to appoint a successor but the appointment was challenged by citizens and as a result we have a special election that will cost the taxpayers $55,000. We had the same thing happen last month in the selection of a successor to Roy O. Day on the Pomona School Board, although the cost to the taxpayer was less because the election was consolidated with the general election.

In the Jan. 7 election there are no fewer than 13 challengers and the ludicrous part is that the winner only gets to serve 10 weeks on the board unless, of course, he is re-elected in the regular board election that comes up in March. In that election three board members will be elected so we can expect many of the also-rans to be back for the main event.

In the Pomona Valley area, never have so many sought a school trustee seat that pays nothing, at least at this time, and historically has few rewards, except the personal satisfaction of public service.

Throughout its nearly 30 years of existence, Mt. Sac has been blessed with good administration, dedicated trustees, excellent faculty, and the finest of facilities.

The college has been fiscally sound, thanks to the wide tax base provided by 16 communities, and a pay-as-you-go construction program. Devoid of politics, the college has enjoyed a reputation for many years as one of the finest junior colleges in California. We hope it will remain that way.

Until recent years school board elections were free of the political arena. The picture has changed however, as the result of, first militant students, then militant teachers, and now taxpayers reluctant to increase their property taxes for public education.

Of the 13 candidates for the Mt. Sac vacancy, a number of them represent special interests or groups and we hope that the voters will be discretionary in their selection of the person who has the most to contribute to the board and the least to receive from service on it. The Progress-Bulletin's recommendation for this election will be published on the Sunday preceding the election.

Will confidence return next year?

St. Nick has passed through. The infant New Year is at the threshold. The matter of life on earth is wobbling into 1975 with people clutching pillar and post or anything else in sight which represents a fragment of stability.

The great, the learned, the profound; the not so great, not so learned and profane all have a view on where the economy has been and where it is headed.

Big people, little people, all people know that by whatever name it is called the economic upheaval of the immediate past is one rough roller coaster ride. The wordsmiths; talk of stagflation and play with other coined phrases to discuss the matter of inflated dollars, reduced purchasing power, recession, etc.

Add to the normal problems of supply and demand the spectre of oil producing nations forcing oil consumers to the wall, then add governmental tax and monetary policies which are virtually strangling wage earners and producers of capital alike and it is little wonder there is a concern on the average person's part about security, a concern which has not existed in the United States since the depression of the 1930s.

There are experts who contend all will be better shortly and there are experts who say it will get a lot worse first.

Then many politicians mix the brew with legislative proposals designed to lull the concern of the masses while making life even more difficult for them.

President Ford, shortly after assuming office, issued instructions to all concerned to cut spending down to size. The President has pushed energy conservation. He supports plans for expanding every known source of increased energy supply through development and exploration. He has worked diligently to walk the line between bringing the economy to a screeching halt and plunging it into a depression and curbing a ruinous rate of inflation.

Whether the people of the nation are able to start walking a straight line, a confident line, in 1975 will depend in large measure on how successful the President is and how well the Congress works with him to serve the nation's interest. Mr. Ford's and Congress' responsibilities are awesome and it is to be hoped the problems will be joined with the concern their resolution in the public interest deserves.

Newspaper Recovery Program lives

For the past five months you have done everything within your power to suppress the good that has come of the struggling "Ben Recycl-Ed" Newspaper Recovery Program, operated by the city of Pomona's Sanitation Department. While at the same time you have run articles in your paper that have put bad light on recycling of newspaper in general, and the Pomona program in particular.

When the program first got under way in July, you ran an editorial supporting the newspaper program, and you ran token articles (a few short paragraphs) as news developed, but the reason I am writing this letter is to point out that despite the lack of support you have given the program, it lives on.

It lives on because too many residents in this city have decided to support it by placing their newspaper out each trash collection day in separate bundles, and too many clubs and organizations have gotten behind the program and helped to publicize it.

Newspaper recycling, and other forms of recycling, is a thing for now and always. More people need to realize this point, from the voter to the elected official.

Thank you for the support you have given, but please try to put a little more into it in the future. Among other things, it may help with your public image. — Terry W. Conner, coordinator, Newspaper Recovery Program.

(Editor's Note: Besides editorially supporting the Newspaper Recovery Program, the Progress-Bulletin has published in the past five months no less than eight stories and photos regarding the program and its progress. During this same period the city's cost of collecting used newspapers has exceeded the income from its sale to Garden State Paper Co. by $8,439. This sum has been paid by the city's taxpayers.)

U.S. nearly pushed into nuclear war

WASHINGTON — The top secret documents stolen a few weeks ago from Daniel Ellsberg contain startling evidence that the Pentagon in 1958 tried to trick President Eisenhower into using nuclear weapons against Communist China.

The military brass plotted, according to the documents, to test their new tactical nuclear weapons in combat. The opportunity came in 1958 during a crisis over two tiny, Nationalist-held islands, Quemoy and Matsu, which the Communists threatened to seize.

The generals deliberately deceived the White House, which was misled, therefore, into tentatively approving the use of nuclear weapons to defend the islands. In other words, the United States was ready to fight a nuclear war 16 years ago over two insignificant islands, which today draw no more than a shrug from our policy-makers.

The story of the Pentagon's deception, of course, has been swept under the top secret stamp. But in 1967, the shocking details were summarized in a secret Rand study by Morton Halpern, who later was to become a top White House security adviser.

While Daniel Ellsberg was with Rand, he had official access to the Halpern report and later made a copy of it in hopes he could someday testify about it to Congress. Halpern, who had classified the two-inch thick document in the first place, has now sought unsuccessfully to declassify it, but had no idea Ellsberg had a copy.

A few weeks ago, sneak thieves broke into Ellsberg's home and hauled off some valuables, including his private papers. Among them was a secret photo copy. Police recovered the papers, which the Justice Department then sought to obtain. But Ellsberg successfully arranged for Congress to get custody.

The explosive Rand report gives a chilling account of the Quemoy-Matsu crisis. Here are the highlights:

The two offshore islands came under intensive Communist artillery attack in 1958. The United States, which was sworn to help Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek defend the islands, assumed the Communists were softening them up for an imminent invasion.

This led to some urgent contingency planning in the Pentagon and the White House. The military brass, according to the report, wanted to use tactical nuclear weapons to destroy China's underground munitions dumps and gun emplacements.

The Pentagon, therefore, falsely informed the White House that the available Air Force planes had no bomb racks that could accommodate high-explosive conventional bombs powerful enough to knock out the underground installations. It would take "nukes," the Pentagon insisted, to do the job.

A copy of this false Pentagon message reached a top commander in the Pacific, who was also eager to test tactical nuclear weapons against the Chinese mainland but who was too honest to mislead the White House.

By secret "back channel" cable, privy only to the top brass, he informed them that they were wrong about the bomb racks. There were adequate racks, he reminded the Pentagon, to handle the most powerful conventional bombs.

The Pentagon fired back a hot order to the honest commander to "shut up," according to the Rand report, and the deception of the White House continued.

Impressed by this and other false information from the Pentagon, President Eisenhower, Secretary of State John Foster Dulles and their advisers went ahead with tentative plans to use nuclear weapons against Communist China.

Wisely, Eisenhower kept in his own hands the final decision when the nuclear button was to be pushed. Meanwhile ,the Quemoy-Matsu crisis happily simmered down.

While the Pentagon maneuvered the nation to the brink of nuclear war, the American people were kept in blissful ignorance of the danger. One of the most compelling comments on this secrecy was made by Christian Herter, the thoughtful, decent man who played a subordinate role in the 1958 crisis before succeeding Dulles as secretary of state the following year.

Those who lived through the Quemoy-Matsu developments, he once recounted, were acutely aware that they were in the midst of America's first nuclear crisis since the decision to bomb Hiroshima and Nagasaki. Yet to this day, the American people haven't been told how close they came to nuclear war.

Footnote: The deception described in the Rand report has been all too typical of the military brass. They continue to use "back channel" communications to exchange messages that they don't want their civilian superiors to see.

In the 1950s, the admirals ordered the Marine receptionist in Navy Secretary Francis Matthews' office to slip them a complete list of people who called upon the secretary and the exact number of minutes they remained.

More recently, the Joint Chiefs used the same system to spy on Henry Kissinger. A Navy yeoman actually rifled through burn bags and pilfered papers from Kissinger's briefcase for the brass.

Unfortunately, the investigation of this incident was entrusted to Senate Armed Services Chairman John Stennis, D-Miss., an apologist for the Pentagon, who ignored evidence implicating Adm. Thomas H. Moorer and let the former Joint Chiefs chairman off the hook.

Nursing homes can be beautiful

American businessmen are more capable of running their businesses than any bureaucrat could be, but: When business managers mismanage — or get neglectful — or get greedy — Big Government is always eager to move in with more regulations.

Or to take over. Big Government has proved utterly inept in running any business, whether it's the postal service or the railroads or health care.

Yet, when private enterprise fumbles the ball, it's government's turn to run with it. In many of the 23,000 nursing homes in the United States the operators are fumbling the ball.

A special Senate Committee on Aging is studying the nursing home industry. It has issued its first report, a 161-page indictment of nursing home inspections.

The committee finds, in "an alarming number of nursing homes," abuse of patients, physical danger to patients, unsanitary conditions, fire hazards, poor or unwholesome food, infections untreated, adverse drug reactions ignored, overtranquilized, mistakes in medication.

The committee is demanding increasing government snoopervision; it says HEW has been overlooking abuses.

And this report is just the beginning. There will be nine such reports at monthly intervals, and if subsequent reports are as rough as my sources indicate they will be — documenting instances of cruelty, negligence, food poisoning and other abuses of patients — there will arise a crescendo of demand that Uncle Sam take over and care for our nation's elderly.

And then I see the Cheyenne Mountain Nursing Center and wonder why they can't all be like that.

Here, beside Tenderfoot Hill in Colorado Springs, is a nursing home for the elderly with a 50-mile view, a resort climate, 300 sunshiny days every year and resident rooms as lovely as in a luxury hotel.

Patio rooms with sliding glass doors that open onto a fountain courtyard.

Two miles of sidewalks to stroll with never a street to cross.

Adjacent is a park preserve with walkways and bridle paths. Nearby is the Broadmoor Hotel with its lavish shops and entertainments.

This nursing center is directed by a licensed career administrator. A staff of registered nurses and practical nurses is on duty around the clock. A staff physician is on call, or residents may be treated by their personal physicians if they prefer. Any personal physician's orders are carried out precisely.

A registered dietician balances every meal. The fire-protected building has corridors 8 feet wide, and the entire premises is as homelike as any such facility could be.

I've seen these Robert Rieger nursing homes elsewhere. I know something of the conscientious planning that goes into each and the sustained standards of excellence in administration.

So I know what can be done without taking your tax dollars to do it. It's sad to see our nation moving unnecessarily toward acceptance of government facilities for the aged; inevitably, there we will pay so much more for so much less.

Just in jest

If you were beginning to have your doubts, let me give you welcome proof that morality is still rampant in the land. —Instead of Playboy centerfold calendars, it is the Girl Scout calendars that are the best sellers in the country today. —And have no fear, the great institution of marriage is bound to survive. Without it how could TV soap operas exist? If the women actresses didn't have husbands to fight with or other women's husbands to engage in illict love with, there would be no story.

Will Rocky fall into Veep trap?

WASHINGTON — Nelson Rockefeller has moved into the Office of Vice President amid the usual fanfare concerning the President's plans to make our new No. 2 man just that — in truth as well as title.

Indeed, the White House press corps has written this story many times in recent years, at the outset of the Eisenhower, Kennedy, Johnson and Nixon administrations.

This Vice President, we're told, is going to be different, playing a more central role in the administration's decision-making process than did any of his predecessors. He'll preside over the National Security Council in the absence of the President and be given an important voice in formulating domestic policy, in addition to several specific assignments in key areas of the federal government.

Promises, promises. In their turn, Nixon, Johnson, Humphrey and Agnew went into the vice-presidency with high hopes for making contributions commensurate with their title, only to learn that the Presidents they served — more particularly, their Presidents' staffs — had other ideas.

Because Lyndon Johnson had been treated cavalierly by Kennedy's staff the feeling was that he'd handle his own Vice President differently. This Johnson did, with a vengeance.

As Vice President, Hubert Humphrey was treated, to euphemize LBJ's more earthy description, like a fifth mammary gland on a bovine. If JFK's White House had denigrated its Vice President with a certain callous contempt, Johnson can be said to have elevated the process to a conscious art-form in dealing with his No. 2 man.

Then came Nixon. Again, there was speculation that RMN's ordeal as Eisenhower's Vice President during the 1950s would redound to Spiro Agnew's benefit. Yet again, despite all those initial assurances that the Vice President's government experience would be put to good use, Agnew, like his predecessors, was soon relegated to ceremonial limbo.

It turned out that Nixon was no more anxious than Eisenhower, Kennedy or Johnson to delegate his presidential powers to another political entity, no matter that the entity happened to be his handpicked choice.

Oh, Agnew could be depended on — as was Nixon during the Eisenhower years — to take the point position regarding controversial issues on whose behalf the President didn't want to risk White House prestige. But when it came to substantive policy-making, whatever power Nixon delegated went to his appointed alter egos, the Haldemans and Erlichemans: men that is, with no constituencies other than the President himself.

So what about Nelson Rockefeller's future as the man one heartbeat away? True, if anyone ever entered the office under conditions that might permit him to escape the trap of vice-presidential impotence, Rocky is the man. Nevertheless historical precedent is against even a political entity of his energy and resources evading the veeptrap.

To be sure, it seems only logical that the man first in line of presidential succession should be included among the inner circle of White House decisionmakers. But politics, more often than not, defies logic — as witness the very process that brought the Ford-Rockefeller administration into being.

Going into mail ordering business?--handle with care

I am 74 and am trying to find something to do to occupy my time.

In trying to work up a mail order business I contacted a company advertised as Unique Ideas in New York City.

I sent the firm a money order for $63, which was supposed to pay for samples and other materials. In return I received a list of 480 names and addresses and about 500 sheets of paper on which were pictures and descriptions of mink fur made into earrings, necklaces, pocketbooks, bow ties and bracelets.

My name and address was printed in a little oblong square of this sheet of paper which served as the order form.

After mailing out 480 of these sheets with a cost of 10 cents postage for each, I received 88 returns.

Some had no address or for some other reason couldn't be filled but I finally received a check along with an order for $47.90 in goods.

I immediately ordered the items to be sent to me C.O.D. so I could fill this order.

My letter was returned with a note on the back stating that the firm did not send articles C.O.D. and that payment must be included with the original order from my customer.

I can't help but wonder what is wrong and I therefore turn to Action Line for help and advice.

I am holding the customer's check and have no intentions of cashing it until I have the goods to send to the customer.

Just what would you advise? —J. H., Chino.

You sent us a copy of the mailer you had been sending to prospective customers.

It contained no mention of Unique Ideas. If an order was not filled, you would be blamed.

We told you that you were right in refusing to surrender your customer's check until arrival of the merchandise.

We asked what you were supposed to be getting out of the transactions with Unique Ideas. You said that was what you had been trying to find out.

We asked Unique Ideas the same question. It was not answered.

Ernie Tucker, president of Administrative Offices at the address you gave us for Unique Ideas, did send us a copy of a two-page letter to you declining to refund your $63 and mentioning a request-application-pledge.

This was the first time we had heard about anything resembling a contract.

The letter said a copy of the signed legal agreement was enclosed but there was no enclosure with the letter we received.

We tried to reach you in person to request a copy. When this didn't succeed we wrote you a letter. You never answered.

At this point we can only suggest two resolutions for 1975:

—Don't sign anything without reading it carefully.

—Be wary of suggested business ventures holding out hopes of quick and easy profit.

Today I called the Minnesota Mutual Life Insurance Co. long distance to find out the status of my husband's claim.

The girl who answered said she couldn't tell whether the claim has been accepted although my husband had been assigned a claim number.

My husband was injured Oct. 19. The forms were held up by the doctor's office until Nov. 22. On that date I sent them by certified mail to the insurance company. They were received five days later.

I attached a note asking that the claim be processed as soon as possible and that I be notified when we could receive benefits.

Our policy has a 30-day waiting period. Our 30 days were up on Nov. 19. —K. D., La Verne.

Our inquiry sent Dec. 9 brought another chronology from Jon B. Meier, supervisor of group health and disability claims for the insurance company.

He said the company received a notice of disability on Dec. 3, approved the claim on Dec. 11 and sent your husband a check for $212.99 on Dec. 13.

He said the check was for the period Nov. 17-Dec. 17. You say it should be for the period ending Nov. 17 and intend to take that matter up with Meier.

Father shouldn't shut his daughter out of his life over her life style

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am the father of three children. Our 19-year-old daughter was married and divorced within seven months and is now living at home while completing her education at UCLA. She is nearly 21.

Our second daughter, Jill, who is just 11 months younger, decided to move in with her boyfriend. She goes to college and works part time.

I find it impossible to condone her actions even though I've been told by many that this is a common practice and the parents see nothing wrong with it. Jill insists she is completely happy and one day she may marry the young man. If, however, they decide to go their separate ways, she claims she will have no regrets because it will have been "a good experience."

Jill's major point is her sister's divorce. She claims that if she and the young man had lived together for several months they would NOT have married.

I have let Jill know that her behavior is totally unacceptable to me and that she is not welcome in our home. My wife is heartbroken about the situation and so am I. Am I wrong, Ann? What are your views? — Sad Dad

Dear Dad: Although a great many students are living together these days I still think the idea is a bummer and I've said so repeatedly. Shacking up is not marriage, as many who have tried it have testified.

I believe you are wrong, however, to close the door on your daughter. She is old enough to choose her own life-style, and you ought not be so rigid and punitive merely because her ideas are different from yours.

Bury the hatchet, already. Life is too short, Dad.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My in-laws' house is a potential death trap for my 15-month-old toddler. Under every sink there are containers with household cleaners, gasoline, lighter fluid, furniture polish and detergents.

My mother-in-law loves my little girl and wants me to leave her there when I go shopping or have a club meeting or attend a church affair. I would love to accept her kind offer, Ann, but I'm scared to death that my child might get into some of that stuff.

My husband says I'm being overly protective. My mother-in-law claims she is a good "watcher" and I have nothing to worry about. What do you say? — Worried

Dear Worried: I say you are absolutely right. Every year approximately 5,000 children die because someone wasn't a good enough "watcher." An additional 12 million children have non-fatal accidents that need medical attention. Stick to your guns, Mother. Tell Grandma that unless she puts all that stuff in a locked cabinet, you will not leave your child with her.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband and I split after four years of marriage. Everything was divided and sold. The lawyers' bills were out of this world.

After three months of hellish loneliness we decided to remarry. We've settled all our differences and are happier now than ever. But — we are still paying the lawyers.

Please tell your readers that if a lawyer is honest he will do everything in his power to get the couple to "reconsider." We feel we've been taken — Taken To The Cleaners

Dear T.: Honorable divorce lawyers almost always attempt reconciliation. Sorry if yours failed to live up to the ethical standards of the profession. Thanks for sharing an experience that may be helpful to others.

Medical shows ether good or bad

By JOSEPH H. FIRMAN

As a child, I was a healthy young beast, and my only knowledge of what went on in hospitals was "that's where Baby Eddy came from," which did nothing for the hospital or my sex education, such as it was.

Today's television has introduced me to the gleaming corridors and antiseptic operating rooms of "Marcus Welby," "Police Surgeon," "Bedpan" and other dramatic hospital shows.

The "men in white" shows are all the rage these days, if you get enraged easily. Those tense figures in surgical smocks and white beanies, those rubber-gloved hands sloshing about among the patient's innards, that pulse-pounding background music!

Big eyes roll wildly above gauze masks; big bosoms heave beneath tight nurses' uniforms. The pulse falters; the violins gallop. Gosh, it's so real you can almost SMELL the iodoform and grease paint.

Usually the drama's least concern is for the big-player lying with his tummy bared to the klieg lights. The real interest is in the soul-searing passions of the doctor, the nurse, the anesthetist and the knife-grinder.

A ruptured appendix is, after all, just a ruptured appendix, and whether the poor clod pops off or whether he "pulls through," as they say, is just a whim of the "writer."

But what conflict and tension amid the sutures, what hatred and jealousy over scalpel and sponge, what suspicion and boredom amid the eye-rolling, rubber-glove set! The doctor is in love with the nurse, and on the operating table before him lies a.) his querulous, aging wife, or b.) the nurse's handsome, wealthy fiancee. Drama indeed.

Or else it is the fading, once-famous, often-gassed brain surgeon, red-eyed and tremulous, trying to pull himself together for one last delicate trepanning. But what he does not know (because his eyesight is failing) is that the patient is his own son. Wowee!

The surgeon either a.) does his whittling expertly and retires honored, beloved and overpaid, or b.) collapses, and his young assistant steps in to take over. The assistant (this will KILL you) is the surgeon's OTHER son, and if the patient dies, the assistant inherits $1 million and a Cal-25. AND he's in love with the nurse—but she's in love with his father.

Endless possibilities, as you can see. Put a chimpanzee in a cage with a typewriter and paper, and in 20 minutes, between a banana and a couple of fleas, he would come up with a plot for a tv medical show. And it would be better than most now on the air.

Frequently, for plot purposes, the patient conks out. This is to show up that sneak of a new surgeon who cheated his way through medical school, or to clear the way for some post-operative nuptials, or to "redeem" the young doctor, purify him in the crucible so he goes forward with renewed dedication and better golf clubs.

Medical television shows won't teach you much about medicine, but they offer a world of information on love, hate, jealousy and tax options.

THE DOCTOR COMMENTS

Patient questions hormone necessity

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am 46 and had my ovaries removed last year. I'm taking Permarin daily.

My doctor is a firm believer in hormones, but I have some reservations about them. In your column you stated that a good examination is needed to find out whether or not hormones are needed. What sort of an examination? A pelvic examination would not reveal this, would it?

I don't believe my doctor gives any special thought to whether or not his patients need female hormones. He says they keep you young, prevent heart attacks, prevent dowagers hump and that there is no danger.

I've read enough to know that not all professional men hold this view. Also, I have heard personally of cases of cancer and then the person was taken off hormones, and cases of blood clots and the patient taken off hormones or their condition attributed to birth control pills.

I would appreciate your view on the use of hormones and what constitutes a good examination.

DEAR READERS—First, it is usually a good idea to provide hormone replacement when the ovaries are removed at a fairly young age. Your doctor's treatment of you in this regard is the norm.

During a pelvic examination if there is a fairly advanced degree of hormone deficiency, drying and shrinking of the tissues can be seen. A few cells taken with a swab as done in a Pap test for cancer can also be stained and examined under the microscope. The color reaction to the stain gives information about how much hormone the body is producing.

The urine can also be examined for the amount of hormone it contains. Your doctor may have done more than you think. Most patients make the mistake of thinking that all the doctor does is what they see. Actually he often does more work when you are not in his office than he does while you are there. All those tests have to be studied and the total picture of information evaluated.

Female hormones do not cause cancer of the breast or cervix. There is some concern about how they are given in relation to cancer of the lining of the womb (endometrial cancer). That is why cyclic bleeding is sometimes induced. The shedding of the lining of the uterus, as occurs in menstruation, may be helpful.

Many doctors do believe that once a cancer occurs female hormones may increase its growth and spread. But, that is much different than saying it causes cancer.

Some women do have an increased tendency to have blood clots while taking female hormones or from increased formation of hormones during pregnancy. Other women have clots form anyway without taking anything. So do men — think about President Nixon's problem. When a woman has this problem with birth control pills or hormones it can usually be managed by small doses of medicine used to prevent blood clots, commonly called blood thinners.

Really, your doctor is doing the right thing for you. Think of it as a replacement therapy for what your body would have been doing anyway with normal ovaries.

Send your questions to Dr. Lamb, in care of Progress-Bulletin, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019. For a copy of Dr. Lamb's booklet on menopause, send 50 cents to the same address and ask for the "Menopause" booklet.

THE LIGHTER SIDE

Cosmic white lightning discovered

By DICK WEST

WASHINGTON (UPI) — First the bad news: Scientists report that Freon gas used in spray cans and cooling systems may be breaking up the ozone layer in the atmosphere.

Now the good news: Scientists have found in the Milky Way a vast molecular cloud of ethyl alcohol that theoretically could be distilled into 10,000 trillion trillion fifths of 200-proof liquor.

The bad news already has been thoroughly examined at recent congressional hearings and needs no elaboration here. But what is the significance of the good news?

Seeking an answer to that question, I got in touch with Dr. Ainsworth McFirmament, chief astronomer and night cashier at the Mt. Balderdash Observatory and Car Wash.

At the time of the interview Dr. McFirmament was focusing his powerful half-inch telescope on the planet Gertrude.

"There's an interesting interplanetary conjunction tonight," he said. "Or it may be an interplanetary preposition. I always have trouble telling them apart.

"Anyway, the planet Gertrude is passing within two and a half feet of the planet Hortense, a phenomenon that only occurs once every three light years, or twice every five heavy years, whichever comes first."

I said, "That's all very nice, Doctor, but what of that Milky Way booze cloud?"

"Well, I'll tell you," McFirmament replied in that deliberate thoughtful way of his, "this discovery appears to substantiate one of the current theories about the origin of the universe."

"Are you referring to the 'Big Bang' theory?"

"No, I'm referring to the 'Big Burp' theory."

He went on to explain that avant garde astronomers are leaning away from the prevailing theory that the universe was created by a stupendous nebular explosion.

These advanced thinkers, he said, now tend to believe the creation of the universe was more in the nature of a cataclysmic cosmic belch.

"According to the 'Big Burp' theory, gases were formed by molecules similar to those found in ethyl alcohol conjoining with molecules present in such substances as tomato sauce, pasta and pepperoni.

"These gases behaved in the manner of gases formed by confining beer and pizza in the human stomach. That is, they became extremely unstable and finally erupted.

"Depending on whether any pizza-like molecules are present, the alcohol cloud may presage the creation of a whole new universe. I just hope I'm around to see it."

Me, too. But I'd rather see them figure out some way to bottle the stuff.

With 10,000 trillion trillion fifths of Milky Way moonshine, who cares what happens to the ozone?

"How can I tell him what he wants to know if I don't know what he's woofing about!"

Did you know that snow is not always white? Red, blue, yellow and even black snow is sometimes seen in many parts of the world.

The snow is not really these colors! If you live in a dusty place, bits of yellow dust in the air may stick to the falling snowflakes and make them look yellow. In other dusty places, the snow can be brown, or even black.

If you built a snowman in the cold Arctic, he might not be white. He might be red, green, or blue.

The bright colors come from many tiny plants that change the color of snow after it has fallen. "Snow" is the name for the tiny ice crystals that form when water vapor in clouds freezes.

Snow is usually white. This is because the tiny crystal surfaces of fresh snow reflect the white light of the sun and make the snow appear white. When snow melts, it becomes colorless water.

Super mistakes wreck Rams' hopes

Vikings take advantage of breaks

LOCAL-NATIONAL
Sports

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (UPI) — It wasn't exactly championship caliber football but the Minnesota Vikings are back in the Super Bowl for the second straight year and will probably be established as favorites to win the National Football League title on Jan. 12 in New Orleans.

The Vikings beat the Los Angeles Rams, 14-10, Sunday for the National Conference title in a comedy of errors and will meet the surprising Pittsburgh Steelers, who dumped heavily-favored Oakland, 24-13, in the AFC title game for the Super Bowl.

The Rams-Vikings game was filled with fumbles, interceptions, dropped balls and costly penalties and in the end, it was that old standby, Minnesota's Purple Gang defense, that saved the day.

The key came in the third period. Minnesota led 7-3 on Fran Tarkenton's 29-yard touchdown pass to Jim Lash in the second period and had the Rams pinned back at the 25. But Los Angeles quarterback James Harris escaped three defenders and hooked up on a 73-yard pass play with Harold Jackson to the Viking two.

John Cappelletti drove to the one and then the complexion of the game changed.

First guard Tom Mack jumped offside, drawing a five-yard penalty, and then Jackie Wallace and Wally Hilgenberg combined for the biggest play of the season for the Vikings.

Harris rolled to his right and threw toward Pat Curran but Wallace tipped the ball and Hilgenberg pulled it in for a touchback. Tarkenton then took the Vikings 80 yards and set up the decisive one-yard touchdown by Dave Osborn with a three-yard scramble that ended just inches short of the goal line.

"The Rams' defense was as good as we've played this season," Tarkenton said. "But our defense was a little better. They made the big plays when they had to and that's the sign of a championship team."

"We were in our basic 6-2 goal line defense," explained Hilgenberg. "Jackie got a good hand on the ball and it came right to me. It's safe to say I've never had a more important interception in my career. I didn't have any thoughts of running it out. I'm too old and too slow for that. I was just looking for a place to fall down."

Tarkenton called Osborn's running the key to the Viking effort in the second half.

"I kept groping around for something that would work," he said. "They took away a lot of the things we like to do. They tried to take Chuck Foreman away from us and that's when we went to Osborn. Dave is not as good as last year—he's better. He's playing the best football he's ever played."

"We knew we couldn't win against them by passing alone," Osborn said. "They've got the No. 1 record in the league against the rush. But we've got as good an offensive line as anybody they've faced. At first it just seemed that they were standing where we were running. But then things started to open up."

Even though the Viking defense made the key play in the end zone to turn the game around, it wasn't through with its heroics.

Harris threw a 44-yard touchdown pass to Jackson to cut the lead to 14-10 in the fourth quarter and later had the Rams on the Minnesota 45.

But two consecutive sacks by the onrushing Vikings dropped him for 18 yards in losses and Minnesota was on its way to New Orleans after Tarkenton ate up the remaining four minutes of the game.

"It was a classic," Tarkenton said. "It was like a street fight. We had two big physical teams beating on each other and it showed in the results. Both teams had a lot of turnovers but that came because people were really hitting each other."

Harris said he had nothing to be ashamed of.

"I know a lot of people don't think I can do the job," said the only black starting quarterback in the NFL.

"But I didn't think I had anything to prove out there. I just wanted to win the game. I think I've shown I can play in this league. Just look at where we are."

There were eight turnovers in the game. The Rams lost three fumbles and the Vikings two and there were three interceptions, two by the Vikings. Penalties also played a big role.

Beside Mack's penalty, Ram defensive end Fred Dryer was called offside after sacking Tarkenton on the Ram 12 and the Vikings went in to score the deciding touchdown four plays later.

Several of the Rams were also seething about a penalty that wasn't called, a 12th man they insisted was on the field when Harris was dumped for one of his crucial losses.

And while there was gloom in the Ram dressing room, Tarkenton looked forward to the Super Bowl.

"I'm kind of glad we're not playing Miami," he said. "I like to see any good team out of there. I'd just as soon play the worst team there is. Pittsburgh is going to be a knockdown, dragout affair. The Steelers have as much talent as anyone in the league and their defense is just awesome."

The Vikings are expected to be listed as favorites since they have gone to the Super Bowl twice in the past while Pittsburgh is making its first appearance. The Vikings, however, lost both times, to Kansas City and then to Miami last season.

Tarkenton summed it all up: "I guess when all the talking is done, we'll really find out in two weeks if we're better than that team that lost to Miami in January."

NO WORDS NECESSARY

Bill Simpson, Rams defensive back, sits with head in hands following 14-10 loss to Minnesota Vikings Sunday.

Even Bud Grant flashes a smile

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (UPI) — Even usually somber Minnesota Coach Bud Grant was jubilant after the Vikings gained a second straight Super Bowl berth with a 14-10 victory over the Los Angeles Rams in the NFC championship game Sunday.

The generally straight-faced Grant flashed a broad grin and said, "If a person can't smile after a game like that, I guess he never can.

"That was a long game, wasn't it? There were an awful lot of turnovers and penalties. Any one of them could have made the difference."

The Rams were penalized 70 yards to Minnesota's 10, each team lost the ball three times on fumbles, Minnesota intercepted two James Harris passes and Los Angeles picked off one Fran Tarkenton toss.

"Both of us had good luck and bad luck," Grant said. "In a game like this, all that counts is who is ahead when it ends. So many plays could have meant the ball game. You've got to feel good when a team like the Rams doesn't score on a long pass."

Tarkenton, who threw 29 yards to Jim Lash for the game's first score and set up Dave Osborn's one-yard scoring plunge in the third quarter with a four-yard scramble, called it the "toughest game I've ever played in.

"It was a classic," he said. "The Rams play as good a defense as I have ever played against. I just kept groping away, looking for something that worked. They took away a lot of things we like to do and I used just about every formation we had."

Trailing 7-3 in the third period, Los Angeles nearly came back on a 73-yard pass from Harris to Harold Jackson, who was knocked out of bounds by Jeff Wright at the Vikings' two.

"I didn't realize Wright had such a good angle on me," said Jackson, who later caught a 44-yard scoring pass. "I just got the ball and went. If I'd realized that he'd had that good an angle, I'd have gone to the inside and cut over."

Two plays later left guard Tom Mack was penalized for illegal motion. Harris then rolled to the right and tried to hit tight end Pat Curran in the end zone. Jackie Wallace tipped the ball and veteran linebacker Wally Hilgenberg intercepted.

"It's safe to say I've never had a more important interception in my career," said Hilgenberg. "I didn't have any thoughts of running it out. I am too old and too slow for that. I was just looking for a place to fall down."

Rams' Coach Chuck Knox said the penalties and fumbles cost Los Angeles the game.

"We moved the football early on a drive. Then came a fumble. Then on another drive, what happens — we fumble again. Then after Jackson's catch, a penalty and we're back to the seven.

"Every time we got something going, something would happen against us. Our team gave it a helluva effort but today things just didn't work out."

Grant said, "When the Rams drove 98 yards and came away empty handed, it really made us feel good. Wright made a great play in forcing Jackson out of bounds. But give Harris some credit too. He turned what could have been a disaster into what was almost a touchdown play (by slipping three tackles before throwing to Jackson)."

Tarkenton said the game boiled down to a "case of good pitching beating good hitting.

"The Rams' defense is the toughest I've ever played against. They did a lot of things which took away a good part of our offense. We had difficulty running wide because their ends take an outside rush. We finally caught them with some traps inside in the second half."

Harris said Los Angeles simply made too many mistakes in opportune situations.

"They beat us and they played better than we did."

Undefeated Mounties win tourney

SANTA MARIA — Mt. San Antonio College edged Fresno City College, 41-40, Sunday night to win the Hancock Holiday Tournament.

Forward George Schader was named the tournament's Most Valuable Player. Center Duaine Harding also was named to the All-Tournament team.

Schader, although scoring only eight points in the championship game, had a total of 61 points for the three games. Harding led tourney rebounders with 36 in the three games.

With the score tied 40-40 and just 16 seconds left in the contest, Harding was fouled by Rams center Mark Schumann. The 6-6 center, shooting in a pressure-packed one-and-one situation, hit the first free throw to give the Mounties the lead and, as it turned out, the game.

Fresno rebounded and called time out. The Rams got the ball down the floor and got off a shot before the game ended. But the shot missed.

"We had our hands in their faces," said coach Gene Victor, "and played good defense. There was a lot of pressure and we played very hard. I can't complain. I'm very happy."

Fresno played a very deliberate game, hence the low score.

Jeff Cox was the high scorer for MSAC with 12 points. Harding and Schader each had eight.

The undefeated Mounties, now 14-0, host Pasadena City College Saturday night.

GREAT EFFORT

Pittsburgh Steeler receiver John Stallworth (82) makes great one-handed catch of pass from Terry Bradshaw, but is ruled out of bounds. Steelers beat Raiders, 24-13.

Steelers look super

OAKLAND (UPI) — Neither an official's bad call, the record-setting brillance of Oakland's Cliff Branch or a highly partisan crowd that kept hollering for their blood all day long, could ruffle the patient, methodical Pittsburgh Steelers, and that's why they're on the way to the Super Bowl today for the first time in their long losing history.

The Steelers, striving for team identification season long, converted a pair of pass interceptions into the points they needed in the fourth quarter Sunday for a 24-13 victory over the Oakland Raiders and a Jan. 12 matchup against the Minnesota Vikings at New Orleans in Super Bowl IX.

"We've been striving to find out who we were all season long," said defensive tackle Joe Greene, who had a large part in the victory over the Raiders, "and now we know we are a damn good football team because we beat a damn good football team."

Greene and linemates L.C. Greenwood, Ernie Holmes and Dwight White combined to hold the Raiders to only 29 rushing yards and even though Franco Harris ran for a pair of touchdowns and 111 yards and Rocky Bleier added 98 rushing yards, in the end it was the play of the Pittsburgh defense that propelled the Steelers to victory and into pro football's showcase game.

"This victory," said coach Chuck Noll, "is the culmination of everything for me and the players. We worked like hell the whole season, overcame some shortcomings and then won the games we had to win. In big games I firmly believe you have to stick to basic football, and that's what we did. We controlled the ball from start to finish and even when we fell behind in the third quarter, I felt we would win it because we never let them get on top of us up front, and that's where you win football games."

Harris, Bleier and quarterback Terry Bradshaw were the only players who carried or threw the ball from scrimmage in an iron-man performance for all three. Harris went eight yards up the middle for one score —the one that tied the game at 10-10 early in the final quarter —and 21 yards on the final Pittsburgh TD in the last minute to put the game out of reach.

Only once before have the Steelers come close to the Super Bowl and that was two years ago, but they lost to the Miami Dolphins in the AFC title game. The Raiders, on the otherhand, have been bridesmaids too many times to please their fans and managing general partner Al Davis. They have the best won-lost record in pro football over the last dozen years but all they have to show for it is one Super Bowl appearance.

The Raiders drew first blood in Sunday's showdown as George Blanda, who may finally call it a career at age 47, booted a 40-yard field goal. The score was set up by a fumble recovery on rookie Lynn Swann, but the Raiders were to hear from Swann a little later in the day.

Roy Gerala missed a "chip shot" field goal from the 10 but later made good on a 23-yarder for a 3-3 standoff. The Steelers should have been in front 10-3 at the half but head linesman Ray Dodez blew a call on an eight-yard pass to John Stallworth in the end zone, so the tie prevailed at least through the intermission.

Dodez ruled Stallworth had stepped out of bounds when he came down with the ball but television replay showed clearly he was well within the out-of-bounds marker and the score should have been allowed.

Noll, magnanimous in victory, later said while he didn't like the call, he didn't let it upset him or his players.

"I told them to go out and forget the call," Noll said, "and to their credit they did. The man (Dodez) simply missed the play."

It didn't seem either side could score again but then Ken Stabler, the AFC Player of the Year who completed 26 touchdown passes during the regular season, got hot and finally got the Raiders in front when Branch outsprinted defender Mel Blount for a 38-yard circus catch and a 10-3 edge.

Branch finished with a record nine catches for 186 yards and was the only man the Steelers' defense couldn't shut off. Still —after Harris had scored his first touchdown and Swann had made a six-yard grab to put the Steelers in front at 17-10 — Branch never got another chance to burn Pittsburgh because the defense pressured Stabler to the point where he was throwing on the run.

That kind of passing resulted in interceptions by Jack Ham and J.T. Thomas in the final minutes, and the Raiders were finished, except for a meaningless 24-yard field goal by Blanda.

"It's tough to come this far and lose," said Raider caach John Madden, "and when you lose, you're open to anything people want to say. Until you win the Super Bowl you have to just sit there and take it. You can't play a team like Pittsburgh and do just one thing. You have to mix the run with the pass, and you have to have confidence when you do run. Winning in the playoffs means being the best team on the field that day. We were not the best team in this game."

So now, while the Raiders have the winter and spring ahead to think about next year the Steelers start gathering themselves together to get ready for the Vikings, who won the NFL title with aa 14-10 victory over the Los Angeles Rams.

"I have no thoughts at the moment about the Super Bowl or the Vikings," said Noll. "You'll have to give me some time to get my thoughts together. I don't know much about Minnesota right now."

Chino, Walnut cagers go after tourney crowns

By KEVIN CLOE
P-B Staff Writer

Two valley high school basketball teams will be going after tournament championships tonight.

Surprising Chino High (7-4) will try and pull a second straight upset when it hosts Cerritos (7-1) in the 8 p.m. championship finals of the 34th Annual Chino High Christmas Classic.

Meanwhile, Walnut High (9-3) hopes the third time is a charm when it tangles with Monrovia in the finals of the Nogales Christmas Tourney. Tipoff time for that one is set for 8:30 p.m.

Chino pulled a stunning upset in the semifinals of its own tournament Saturday night by knocking off top seeded and unbeaten Miraleste in three overtimes to reach the finals. Now the Cowboys are faced with another challenge.

Cerritos, paced by All-CIF guard Ben Howland and forward Darrell Hall, is seeded second in the tourney and is extremely tough. The Dons knocked off two strong valley teams, Ganesha and Claremont, back-to-back in the tourney.

However, Chino has shown improvement in the past couples of games with the sudden explosiveness of forward Mike Coppess, guard Hector LaMarque, and forward Jimmy Love.

Coppess scored 31 points in the win over Cerritos, while LaMarque and Love came up with 22-point efforts in the past two days of the tourney.

Also 6-foot-10 center Dirk Story is playing with unusual aggressiveness, while also averaging 12.1 points per game. Coppess is the leading scorer for the Cowboys with a 12.5 average. Love has averaged 9.3 points an outing so far this season.

Tonight will be Walnut's third appearance this year in a tournament championship game. The Mustangs lost both previous times (in the Temple City Tourney and the Laguna Beach Tourney) to Miraleste by one point.

Now there's no Miraleste to stand in the way of a Walnut title.

The Mustangs emerged into the finals almost the same way Chino did. Coach Bill Murray's club dumped top-seeded and unbeaten Los Altos in two overtimes Saturday night.

The starting lineup for the Mustangs will probably be Ken Czarnecki (15.1 average) and Cliff Manning (12.6) at forwards, Jay Wetzel (10.3) at center, and Kelly Bowlin (12.2) and Tommy Thompson (4.5) at the guard spot.

Ganesha will be shooting for a fourth-place title in the Chino Tournament tonight at 5 p.m. when it tangles with Alta Loma, and Claremont takes on Miraleste at 6:30 p.m. for the third place trophy. University will battle Escondido for the consolation title.

In the Nogales Tourney, Charter Oak and Nogales will fight it out for the fifth place title at 3:30 p.m., Baldwin Park faces Bassett for the consolation title at 5 p.m., and Los Altos tests La Puente for the third place spot at 7 p.m.

Chaffey High will also see some action tonight when it battles Murphy in the consolation finals of the Covina Tournament.

Irish get more bad news

MIAMI (UPI) — As in the case of George Foreman and Richard Burton, this has not been a good year for Notre Dame.

There has been one crisis after another with the Fightin' Irish this season, and the latest incident occurred Sunday when it was learned at least two players, and possibly three, would not be able to play in the New Year's Night Orange Bowl game against Alabama.

A spokesman for the Irish said that linebacker Greg Collins, center Mark Brenneman and fullback Wayne Bullock all were doutbful starters because of injury or illness suffered during the last two weeks.

Brenneman, a senior who is regarded as the Irish' most consistent offensive lineman, suffered a hairline fracture of the right foot in the game against Southern California last month. Everyone thought he would be okay but he reinjured the foot playing basketball and has not practiced with the team for a week.

Collins, captain of the defensive team and the team leader in tackles, fell off a rented motorcycle at the team's training camp at Marco Island, Fla., Saturday and needed 11 stitches to close a badly cut knee.

Bullock, the Irish's leading rusher with 855 yards and 12 touchdowns, has been sick with the flu and missed the last four practices. He was reported feeling better Sunday, but his status for Wednesday night's game was uncertain.

The latest news was no doubt a boost to the morale of the Alabama squad, but the Crimson Tide really doesn't need it. Anyone who believes in the psychological effects of revenge will tell you the Tide can't possibly lose Wednesday night.

Then again, anyone who ever saw Ronald Reagan, as George Gipp, emote on his death bed or watched Pat O'Brien, as Knute Rockne inspire his troops at halftime, knows how much emotion has meant in the success of Notre Dame throughout the years.

There you have it. Revenge vs. emotion. Two ingredients expected to bring out the best (or worst) in two of college fooball's most storied teams and all the promoters of this 41st annual extravaganza as happy as Anita Bryant.

The only sure winners are the promoters. Fans began arriving by the droves early Sunday morning and everyone is anticipating a record crowd for the New Year's night contest. The previous record for an Orange Bowl game was 80,699 on Jan. 1, 1971, when Nebraska met LSU but already 80,000 seats are gone for this one.

The revenge factor is indeed strong for Alabama. Last year, at the Sugar Bowl in New Orleans, Notre Dame spoiled "Bama's" perfect season with a 24-23 victory in what many consider the most exciting Sugar Bowl game ever played. That loss sticks deeply in the minds of all the Alabama players.

There is, of course, something more at stake for Alabama than just revenge. There's a national championship resting on the outcome. Alabama, 11-0, currently holds the No. 1 spot in the UPI Board of Coaches ratings and a victory would almost certainly lock up a second straight UPI championship. A loss would probably eliminate them.

"It is up to us," says Crimson Coach Paul "Bear" Bryant, who has gone seven straight seasons without a bowl winner. "We made a decison to go to a bowl which gave us the opportunity to play for the national championship and ended up in the Orange Bowl. If we win, we'll be happy. If we lose it, it will be because we aren't good enough."

Notre Dame, while seemingly out of the national championship picture with a 9-2 record, will get its inspiration from the fact it will be Coach Ara Parseghian's last game. Parseghian recently resigned as coach after 11 seasons as head man of the Irish during which he brought the school's football program back to national prominence.

"You know they'll want to win one for Ara," says Bryant. "They'll probably be playing one for the Gipper, Ara, Leahy, the Rock —all at once. Hell, we may be playing some ghosts.

"But I hope our boys will win one for themselves."

Woody stays quiet about fullback spot

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — Ohio State football coach Woody Hayes doesn't know who his starting fullback will be on New Year's Day.

It could be Champ Henson, a senior from Ohio. Or it could be Pete Johnson, a sophomore from Georgia.

During the regular season, Henson, who suffered a serious knee injury last year, and Johnson, divided the fullbacking duties.

"I have flipped a coin to decide who was going to start," Hayes said Sunday. "But they (Henson and Johnson) didn't like that.

"So I told them I'd start the one who does the best in practice and let him keep the starting position as long as he does well."

Hayes sent his Buckeyes through their final "hard" workout at Citrus College at Azusa, Calif., Sunday and then pronounced his team "fit and ready."

He said starting split end Dave Hazel, who has an ankle injury, would be ready for Ohio State's Rose Bowl meeting with University of Southern California.

"I'm not satisfied with what we've done in practice," Hayes smiled, "but I'm never satisfied. We haven't played in five weeks and we may be mistake prone. And mistakes will decide most any game."

Asked about Pat Haden, USC's Rhodes Scholar quarterback, and what effect the layoff (the Trojans' last game was Nov. 30) would have on him, the Ohio State coach replied:

"I expect Pat Haden to be as sharp as a dart. He's had three weeks to prepare for this game and that's plenty of time to develop a good passing game."

A reporter queried Hayes and Big Ten commissioner Wayne Duke if they thought the Rose Bowl should be decided by an overtime if it ended in a tie.

Texas Tech and Vanderbilt fought to a 6-6 deadlock in the Peach Bowl at Atlanta Saturday.

"I'd have to think about it but the overtime idea does have some merit," the Ohio State coach said. "Of course, your players might be exhausted and that's when you might get an injury."

Said Duke: "I'm too far away from coaching to comment on that because I think something like that should be up to the coaches. But if it's done, it should be for all games and not just bowls."

Hunter will trim eight good offers

AHOSKIE, N. C. (UPI) — A list of "eight good offers" for the services of righthander Jim "Catfish" Hunter will be trimmed today and Hunter may be able to decide by New Year's day what club he'll chose to sign with and end his status as a free agent.

A member of his bargaining team, attorney Joe Flythe, said Sunday Hunter would go over the list today, examining the proposals and cutting the offers, expected to run to more than $1 million, to as few as two by Tuesday and "he may have a final decision on Wednesday."

But, said the attorney, the decision could take longer if the 28-year-old Cy Young Award winner wants to visit some of the cities on his list and compare facilities and living conditions. However, he added, "He's familiar with most of them."

Hunter could not be reached Sunday but has said he would like to visit cities if he has difficulty making a choice.

Announcement of which team has won the bidding war, which broke out Dec. 14 when Hunter was ruled a free agent by an arbitration board, will probably be made by the club, Flythe said.

As many as 18 teams submitted offers, five dropped out of the bidding and the San Francisco Giants did not contact Hunter. Three teams, the Texas Rangers, Montreal Expos and New York Yankees, sent representatives to meet with him twice.

Flythe said several teams he declined to name would send representatives for the final session and "those others will be standing by" the telephone.

Hunter and the lawyers, he said, would compare "the various offers so Jim can decide which one he wants to take. We'll be talking to most people tomorrow and hopefully will narrow the field considerably by the end of the day."

Leos rally to win by one

CHICO — La Verne College rallied from a 26-point deficit Sunday and came back to edge Moffett Field, 79-78.

The Leopards (5-5) never took the lead until center Tim Gillette scored the winning basket with only eight seconds left in the game and La Verne trailing, 78-77.

Gillette, an All-tournament selection, got the ball at the free throw line, turned and shot. The ball hit the backboard and bounced off. Gillette rebounded and shot again. This time the ball went through and the Leos had the win.

The victory gave the Leopards seventh place in the Chico Invitational Tournament. Guard Dave Casteneda played only briefly because of a sore back.

La Verne travels to Whittier Saturday night to open conference play.

In other games, Sacramento St. upset favored Alaska 79-75 to take first place. Stainislaus St. beat host Chico St., 68-56 for third place. Whittier defeated Redlands 66-60 for fifth place.

Brian Saunders of Redlands also made the All-tournament team.

Texas feeling lost in new bowl game

By United Press International

For fans undaunted by Saturday's outpouring of mediocrity, college football's glut of post-season "classics" continues tonight with Texas meeting Auburn in the Gator Bowl.

This is another battle of runners-up as Auburn lost the Southeastern Conference title to Alabama in the season finale and Texas was edged for the Southwest Conference championship by Baylor.

KABC (7), 6 p.m.

In Saturday's games, Mississippi State edged North Carolina, 26-4, in the Sun Bowl; Oklahoma State downed Brigham Young, 16-6, in the Fiesta Bowl; Vanderbilt and Texas Tech battled to a 6-6 tie in the Peach Bowl and the East topped the West, 16-14, in the Shrine East-West game.

The Longhorns can be excused if they appear lost at the outset of tonight's game as it marks the first time in eight years Texas will not be the host team in the Cotton Bowl.

Texas was beaten badly by SWC rival Texas Tech early in the season, then was upset by Baylor later in the year. Additionally, the Longhorns dropped a 16-13 non-conference game to Oklahoma.

Auburn finished the regular season with a 9-2 record, losing to SEC rivals Florida and Alabama.

Texas, which relies on its wishbone offense, is bolstered by quarterback Marty Akins' recovery from a pair of sprained ankles. Longhorn Coach Darrell Royal said Akins is now "running at full speed."

Challenging the Texas attack will be Auburn's superb defensive unit, which keyed the War Eagles' success this season.

Mississippi State sophomore Walter Packer ran for a Sun Bowl record of 183 yards and scored two touchdowns as the Bulldogs' running attack accounted for 455 yards.

Packer's freshman running mate, Terry Vitrano, actually won the game's Most Valuable Player award after gaining 164 yards and scoring the Bulldogs' other touchdown.

Brigham Young lost quarterback Gary Sheide to a separated shoulder in the first quarter of the Fiesta Bowl and Cougars Coach Lavell Edwards was not the least bit hesitant to blame his team's defeat on the injury.

"I think we would have won," said Edwards, who was forced to substitute little-used reserve Mark Giles. "I don't think he (Giles) had played the equivalent of a full quarter all season."

Oklahoma State, despite Sheide's absence, was unable to lock up the victory until 1:14 was left in the game when halfback Leonard Thompson hit Gerald Bain with a 40-yard touchdown pass.

Brian Hall kicked a 35-yard field goal with 2:21 left in the Peach Bowl to tie Vanderbilt, which had taken a 6-3 lead just three minutes earlier on Mark Adams' 26-yard field goal.

After missing a game-tying extra-point attempt early in the fourth quarter, Central Michigan's Mike Franckowiak kicked a 32-yard field goal with 4:34 left to win the East-West game for the Eastern squad.

Bucks win big, but remain last

By United Press International

The most irrelevant statistic in the National Basketball Association is that the Milwaukee Bucks are in last place in the Midwest Division.

What's important is that the Bucks are only 4-½ games out of first place—closer to first place than the second-place teams in the Central and Pacific Divisions.

Additionally, the Bucks have won 10 of their 16 games since the return of Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Sunday night virtually ran the New York Knicks out of the building in scoring a 115-89 victory.

Abdul-Jabbar's presence forced the Knicks to shoot from the outside and set the stage for a third-period blitz during which the Bucks outscored the Knicks, 19-6. The six points by the Knicks were the fewest scored in a period by the club since the adoption of the 24-sceond clock by the NBA in 1954.

The Bucks led, 67-65, with 6:49 left in the third period but scored the next 15 points and New York was scoreless for the remainder of the period while Milwaukee opened an 82-65 lead. Abdul-Jabbar, a doubtful starter because of a strained back, started, scored 27 points and had 14 rebounds while Bob Dandridge added 31 for the Bucks. Harthorne Wingo led the Knicks with 16 points.

The Cleveland Cavs defeated the Atlanta Hawks, 110-103, the Kansas City-Omaha Kings beat the Portland Trail Blazers, 103-99, and the Boston Celtics topped the Seattle SuperSonics, 121-101, in other NBA games.

Cavs 110, Hawks 103

Jim Chones hit on 11 of 12 from the field as he scored 25 points and led the Cavaliers to their victory. The Cavs made 50 of 80 shots from the floor for a .625 percentage and had a 106-90 lead with 2:23 left in the game. Ted Henderson scored 27 points for the Hawks.

Kings 103, Blazers 99

Nate Archibald scored 31 points and Jimmy Walker added 19 for the Kings, who outscored the Trail Blazers, 12-4, in the last 5:23 of the game. Sidney Wicks had 25 points for Portland.

Celtics 121, SuperSonics 101

Dave Cowens' 26 points led six Celtics scoring in double figures as the Boston fast break kept Seattle off-stride through most of the game at Seattle. The Celtics had a 58-53 halftime lead and gradually increased it during the final two periods.

Conquistadors 126, Spirits 114

Travis Grant scored 33 points and Dwight Lamar had 28 in leading the Conquistadors over the Spirits. Rookies Marvin Barnes and Fly Williams led the Spirits with 28 and 26 points respectively.

Colonels 125, Sounds 114

Artis Gilmore scored 33 points and pulled down 27 rebounds in leading the Colonels' triumph despite a 37-point performance by the Sounds' Tom Owens. The victory enabled the Colonels to regain first place in the Eastern Division from the idle New York Nets.

Nuggets 124, Spurs 121

The Nuggets rallied for their 19th straight home win, with the help of reserve center Dave Robisch, who scored six points in the fourth period. Ralph Simpson scored 25 points for the Nuggets, who trailed by as many as 14 points. Rich Jones scored 33 points for San Antonio.

The meet, open to everyone 10 years of age and older, will be held Tuesday. Field events will begin at 9:30 a.m. and running events at 10 a.m.

USC seeks Holiday title

By United Press International

Indiana, Southern California and Alabama, all ranked in the Top Ten, get their chances tonight to add their names to the list of college basketball's numerous holiday tournament champions.

Second ranked Indiana meets host Hawaii in the finals of the Rainbow Classic at Honolulu; fifth ranked Southern Cal takes on Fordham for the championship of the Holiday Festival at New York; and sixth ranked Alabama faces LaSalle in the finals of the Sugar Bowl Classic at New Orleans.

In other title games tonight, 14th ranked Oregon opposes Washington State in the finals of the Far West Classic at Portland, Ore., 16th ranked Providence plays host to St. John's (N.Y.) for the championship of the Ocean State Classic; and Kansas meets Iowa State in the finals of the Big Eight tourney at Kansas City, Mo.

In semifinal action Saturday night, Indiana knocked off Big Ten rival Ohio State 102-71 and Hawaii got past Villanova 75-65 to reach the finals of the Rainbow Classic while Southern Cal tripped 20th ranked Rutgers 81-66 and Fordham whipped St. Joseph's (Pa.) 94-66 in the Holiday Festival.

Oregon edged ninth ranked Arizona State 80-76 and Washington State upset Oregon State 68-65 in the Far West Classic; Providence beat Drake 83-73 and St. John's shocked 10th ranked South Carolina 78-77 in overtime in the Ocean State Classic; and Kansas edged Nebraska 63-62 and Iowa State beat Kansas State 82-64 in the Big Eight.

On Sunday, Alabama walloped Houston 105-88 and LaSalle topped Furman 69-64 in the seimifinals of the Sugar Bowl tourney.

Third ranked UCLA posted what has to be considered the most impressive tournament victory Saturday night when it handed seventh ranked Maryland an 81-75 defeat in the finals of the Maryland Invitational.

It was Maryland's first loss in eight games, enabling the Bruins to up their record to 8-0 and leading UCLA coach John Wooden to claim his team is "one of many, very many that could go all the way" to the NCAA championship.

He listed Maryland, defending champion North Carolina State, North Carolina and a number of UCLA's Pacific Eight rivals as potential NCAA champions this year.

Wooden said his club had been relatively untried as a road team until Saturday night and commented, "I'm very proud that we did as well as we did against a very strong opponent."

Dave Meyers' career-high 32 points paced the Bruins over the Terrapins who managed to close a 16 point deficit to only two with 3:39 left to play. However, at that point, sophomore Marques Johnson took over for UCLA, scoring six of his team's last eight points to preserve the victory.

Top ranked North Carolina State, while not involved in a tournament, managed to run its winning streak to 36 games by downing Pittsburgh 86-70 after trailing 36-33 at halftime. All-America David Thompson and teammate Phil Spence tallied 20 points apiece to pace the Wolfpack.

In addition to UCLA, other major tournament winners Saturday night included: 18th ranked Marquette in the Milwaukee Classic; New Mexico in the Lobo Classic; Oral Roberts in the Oral Roberts Classic; Minnesota in the Pillsbury Classic; Michigan in the Motor City Classic; Dartmouth in the Kodak Classic; San Francisco in the San Francisco Invitational; Miami (Ohio) in the Evansville Classic; Old Dominion in the Old Dominion Classic; University-Las Vegas in the Las Vegas Classic; and Northeast Louisiana in the Pacemaker Classic.

Centenary won the 39th annual All College tournament Sunday night by defeating host Oklahoma City 91-80 behind Leon Johnson's 21 points.

San Francisco, Nevada-Las Vegas and Long Beach State also came away with tournament titles. The Dons upended Santa Barbara, 78-72, in the San Francisco Invitational, the Rebels took their own tourney, the Las Vegas Classic, with an 8064 win over Fresno State and the 49ers captured the International Classic, posting a 58-54 victory over Weber State.

UOP was a consolation bracket finalist in the All-College Tournament, edging Niagara, 73-71, in overtime. San Diego State finished third in the Oral Roberts Classic with a 62-53 victory over Harvard while Loyola of Los Angeles was third in the San Francisco event with a 70-62 win over Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo.

Consolation losers included Santa Clara, 66-55, to Southern Illinois in the Indiana State Classic, Portland, 78-70, to Denver in the Evansville Classic and San Jose State, 82-74, to Tulsa in the Rainbow Classic.

Santiago is happy after three wins

ARCADIA, Calif. (UPI) — Angel Santiago suffered a serious head injury in a spill at Saratoga in New York in August and the jockey from Panama wasn't able to return to competition until November.

"People are always asking me about the accident," he said. "But it's like it never happened because I don't remember anything about it."

Santiago showed he was fully recovered Sunday when he piloted three winners on a muddy track at Santa Anita, capping his day with a seventh-length triumph aboard Fair Test in the $43,750 San Gabriel Handicap.

"What a day," agreed the Panamanian riding standout. "I'm really happy.

"My horse (Fair Test) got a real easy lead with no trouble and that was it."

So after four days of the 76-day meeting here, four jockeys, including Santiago, have four wins. The others are Laffit Pincay, Bill Shoemaker and Alvaro Pineda.

On Sunday's program, Pincay suffered his first blank of the new season but still increased his unofficial 1974 earnings to $4,234,241, a record.

That's $12,250 more than Angel Cordero, whose trip to California Sunday was canceled when Anono, his mount in the San Gabriel, was scratched.

Cordero begins a seven-day suspension in New York today, assuring Pincay of his fifth straight money-winning championship.

In the mile and one-eighth San Gabriel, originally scheduled for the turf course, Fair Test defeated 2-1 favorite Indefatigable, with Jacinto Vasquez up. Indefatigable was nine lengths in front of third-place Montmartre.

Confederate Yankee finished fourth in the field of six older horses. Six horses were scratched, including highly regarded Key To The Kingdom.

With his second triumph in a dozen starts this year, Elmendorf Farm's Fair Test paid $9 to win and brought $25,750 to his owner, Max Gluck.

The 6-year-old son of Time Tested and Princess Fair was clocked in 1:37 3-5.

Santiago's other wins Sunday came aboard Areyto ($8.60) in the first race and Parlance ($15.60) in the second.

The $25,000-added La Habra Stakes for 3-year-olds will be held at six furlongs Tuesday.
